

State Readies Tree Seedlings For Landowners

CHECKS SEEDLINGS — L. Franklin Wood, superintendent of the Zanesville State Nursery, checks conifer seedlings which will be available to Ohioans for planting in 1976. The state operates three nurseries in which hardwoods, conifers, and windbreak stock are grown.

Ohio Citizens have been offered a unique way to celebrate America's Bicentennial and provide a natural legacy for future generations at the same time.

Ohioans who own tracts of land may purchase tree seedlings at bargain prices from the Ohio Department of Natural Resources' Division of Forestry. The trees will be ready next spring in time for Bicentennial planting.

Landowners can choose from 24 species of trees including hardwoods, conifers, and windbreak stock grown at Ohio's state nurseries at Zanesville, Marietta, and Green Springs. However, the trees cannot be used on residential lots, for Christmas trees, or for ornamental purposes.

The minimum order is 500 seedlings in 250-plant bundles except for windbreak planting stock, which has a minimum order of 50 plants in multiples of 10 seedlings.

Cost per 1,000 seedlings is $20 if the order is picked-up at a state nursery, $24 for state truck delivery to a central point in Pickaway County or $28 for parcel post delivery to the landowner's house.

Windbreak stock is 12 cents if picked-up at a state tree nursery, 15 cents for state truck delivery and 17 cents for parcel post delivery.

In addition, black walnut seed nuts are available for $11 a bushel will call, $14 for state truck delivery and $16 for parcel post shipment.

Varieties available at the Green Springs Nursery include black alder, white ash, cottonwood, black locust, silver maple, red oak, white ash, sycamore, black walnut, hybrid poplar cuttings, buckeye, and butternut.

At the Marietta Nursery, Ohioans can get rose acacia, sweet gum, sugar maple, red maple, autumn olive, tulip tree, hybrid poplar cuttings, hemlock, red pine, Austrian pine, shortleaf pine, Virginia pine, white pine, Norway spruce, and arborvitae.

Varieties at the Zanesville Nursery are black alder, tulip tree, Austrian pine, pitch pine, red pine, white pine, Norway spruce, autumn olive, black locust, sugar maple, and hybrid poplar cuttings.

The hardwoods are all one year stock, the conifers are two year stock and the wind break planting are three-year transplants.

Order blanks and price lists for the seedlings are available at the local offices of the Forestry Division's service foresters, and the Soil and Water Conservation District office.

Information may also be obtained at the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office or by writing to the Division of Forestry, Ohio Department of Natural Resources, Fountain Square, Columbus, 43224.

Passes Senate, May Die In House

Fuel Compromise Fades

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the Senate voted to remove federal price controls from natural gas, the plan appears headed for the backburner in the House.

The bill, passed by the Senate 58 to 32 Wednesday, would mean higher prices for natural gas, despite amendments aimed at softening and delaying the impact on homeowners. The administration backs the bill.

In addition to phasing out price controls over a 10-to-12-year period, the bill includes emergency provisions designed to avert a predicted shortage of gas this winter, which federal officials say could cost 500,000 Americans their jobs.

Reps. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., and John B. Dingell, D-Mich., who handle most energy legislation in the House, have said they see no way the House will consider repealing price controls on gas this year.

However, House leaders have indicated they will seek quick approval of provisions to avoid an immediate shortage.

The House insistence on separate handling of the immediate shortage and long-term pricing policy would force the Senate and the Ford administration to back down and settle the pricing question later.

Four Eastern Republicans joined 28 Senate Democratic liberals in unsuccessfully opposing the natural gas bill. Only minutes before, on a 50 to 41 vote, the Senate chose the Republican approach over a Democratic proposal that would have treated the winter shortage but left federal price controls untouched.

Under the Senate bill, all controls on the price of "new" gas pumped from onshore wells would expire next April 4. Controls on "new" offshore gas would end on Jan. 1, 1981.

But as a result of an amendment approved Wednesday, the price of "old" gas would remain under federal controls forever.

That amendment has the effect of delaying for several years the price increases that otherwise would result if "old" gas were freed from controls as current sales contracts expire.

But even with that softening amendment, the Senate-passed bill would assure that within 10 to 12 years, there would be no federal controls on the price of any U.S. gas.

The Senate's proposal to avert a gas shortage this winter would allow gas-short pipelines serving nonproducing states to buy surplus intrastate gas at prices not to exceed the highest price paid in the producing states this summer.

That price would range from $1.30 to $2 per thousand cubic feet — which is up to seven times what some pipelines now pay for gas. All this expensive gas would go to industries and other large users, leaving the 32-cent gas for homeowners, farmers and other small users.

Before passing the gas bill, the Senate rejected two efforts to break up the giant oil and gas companies.

By a 50 to 40 vote, the Senate defeated an amendment by Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., that would have forced the largest oil producers to sell off their refineries, pipelines and service stations.

A 53 to 39 vote rejected a proposal by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to force the 20 largest oil and gas firms to dispose of their holdings in other energy sources.

By a 50 to 40 vote, the Senate defeated an amendment by Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., that would have forced the largest oil producers to sell off their refineries, pipelines and service stations.

A 53 to 39 vote rejected a proposal by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to force the 20 largest oil and gas firms to dispose of their holdings in other energy sources.

Resource Control Secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — Antitrust lawyers at the Federal Trade Commission say the government lacks reliable information about who controls the nation's energy resources.

In a 768-page study on development of coal, oil, natural gas and uranium deposits on public land, an FTC task force said, "At present, it is impossible to determine with any precision, who owns what."

Release of the study by the commission's Bureau of Competition was one of several developments Wednesday related to the role of giant corporations in control of energy resources.

They included:

—FTC antitrust lawyers were digging in for a fight to pursue a two-year-old lawsuit against the nation's eight biggest oil companies. An administrative law judge has recommended the FTC consider dropping the antitrust action.

—By votes of 50 to 40 and 53 to 39, the Senate rejected attempts to bar oil producers from also engaging in refining, transportation and marketing and also to prohibit oil firms from producing or distributing other energy sources such as coal and uranium.

—In a parallel action, industry and government witnesses before a Senate subcommittee said legislation to bar oil companies from developing other energy sources was unnecessary and potentially harmful.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Thomas E. Kauper, head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, told the Senate antitrust subcommittee that "the factual basis for legislation to categorically prohibit cross-ownership of energy sources has yet to be demonstrated."

Kauper said such legislation might force oil companies to abandon research on coal liquefaction and gasification and "such a result may well be contrary to the public interest."

Oil firms control an estimated 35 per cent of the nation's known coal reserves and 50 per cent of the uranium reserves.

Meanwhile, Administrative Law Judge Alvin L. Berman said the energy crisis, which he called "one of the most crucial issues this nation has ever faced," had arisen since the filing in 1973 of the FTC's antitrust suit and the FTC ought to take another look at the matter.

But sources within the commission said there was substantial opposition within the Bureau of Competition against Berman's recommendation as well as outrage over the fact that copies of the judge's recommendations were circulated within the petroleum industry before an official copy reached the FTC.

The FTC suit accused Exxon, Gulf, Shell, Texaco, Mobil, Atlantic Richfield, Standard Oil of California and Standard Oil of Indiana of jacking up consumer prices and company profits.

The suit said the companies monopolize the flow of oil from well to gas pump, giving them power to shut off supplies to independent stations.

In the suit, the FTC asked that the oil companies be required to turn 40 to 60 per cent of their refining capacity over to 10 to 13 newly created firms.

Red Chinese Talked Tough To Kissinger

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese attacked Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's Soviet policy publicly during his visit to Peking partly to encourage forces in the United States opposed to detente, a senior American official said today.

The official also said the Chinese concern over Soviet-American relations reflects a need of the current leaders in Peking to cement their position by acting firmly toward both Moscow and Washington.

The official briefed newsmen on Kissinger's plane as the secretary flew to Japan after a five-day stay in the Chinese capital. Kissinger goes on to Washington Friday after telling Japanese officials about his talks with the Chinese.

The official insisted that Kissinger's talks with Chairman Mao Tse-tung and Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping were satisfactory and achieved nothing more nor less than was originally expected.

He said the Chinese concern over detente is well known and that Peking's leaders said nothing to Kissinger this time that they hadn't said during his previous seven trips to China.

Stressing that the Chinese and U.S. governments have enough in common to maintain a relationship, the official gave this outline of the Chinese attitude:

—The Chinese feel they have reason to fear an attack from the Soviet Union.

—Detente is a danger to China because it may weaken American resolve to resist Soviet expansionism and thus give Moscow room to work against Peking.

—The Chinese also feel that Vietnam, Watergate and other problems of the U.S. government have weakened the United States and its ability to maintain a strong international commitment.

The official said the Chinese have decided, therefore, to criticize detente publicly in order to bolster anti-Soviet elements in Congress. Kissinger is not particularly bothered by this attempt to interfere in American politics, the official continued, because it cannot disrupt American policy.

The secretary of state reportedly told the Chinese that while his and their tactics toward the Soviet Union differ, their basic perceptions do not: both are determined to resist Soviet expansionism.

Before his departure from Peking, Kissinger told reporters that the preparations for President Ford's trip to China next month, one of the chief purposes of his trip, "are proceeding well."

The senior official said more exchanges are needed and that the announcement of the dates of Ford's visit will be made in the next few weeks.

Early Completion Seen For New Hospital Addition

By SUE BOYER
Herald Staff Writer

The board of directors of Berger Hospital discussed the completion of the new ancillary addition Wednesday night. Hospital administrator Charles Rideout noted that the December completion date was looking good and perhaps those services to be housed in the new addition could be moved there even sooner than the original projected date.

Approval was given for payment of the following construction bills: State Electric, $18,500; Steward Construction, $105,293; Sauer Inc., $1,891.50. With the payment of these invoices totaling $125,684.50, 80 per cent of the construction costs have been paid.

Rideout advised the board that the equipment for the new wing has been ordered totaling $72,000.

Mary Lundberg, representing the General Guild, was present at the meeting and reported the group had met and voted to spend $22,000 on the emergency room in the new ancillary wing.

Most of the meeting time was spent discussing the proposed budget for 1976. The budget, which totals $602,000 more than last year's budget, was approved by the board. Rideout noted that the 32 per cent increase over last year's projected expenditures related to increased costs of operating the new building. He pointed out that the board would see increases in the salaries and fringe benefits of the employees, operation of the emergency room, supplies and utilities, interests, and leasing the x-ray equipment. An estimate of an additional $10,000 per month on utilities alone was made in the budget.

The insurance package including malpractice coverage was approved from the Hummel and Plum agency.

Harry Clifton, chairman of the finance committee, presented the financial report for the month of September. He said that $10,000 was written off for charity in connection with the stipulation for the funds obtained several years ago when the hospital received money for the maternity wing from the Hill-Burton Fund.

Clifton also reported that the occupancy of the hospital was up for the month. Occupancy was 77 per cent. There were 30 babies born, 76 operations performed and 1,105 emergency room visits during September.

The board authorized the administrator to apply to the Blue Cross Board for a rate increase. Rideout suggested that the rates for x-ray, laboratory, emergency room, operating room, recovery room and inhalation therapy be increased to absorb some of the increased costs of operation.

Action was held on the repair of the air conditioning system in the obstetrics department. Rideout commented that he felt he could get a better price after the first of the year during the off season.

In other action, the board discussed the use of the vacated areas in the old structure when the new addition becomes operational. Rideout presented a rough draft of the uses he had planned for the areas. He said an additional eight to eleven beds could be placed in part of the area. Some of the office space which now occupies the second floor will be moved down to the present emergency room area.

Rideout also reported to the board that the Community Committee had met one time and 12 of the 20 people on the committee had attended. The committee is scheduled to meet again on Nov. 17.

The application of William P. Mooney, D. O. was approved by the board for courtesy staff privileges in the emergency services. Mooney had already been approved by the medical staff.

Just before adjournment, the board acknowledged the donation made to the building fund made by the Hedges Chapel Sunday School Class.

Pay Raise Approved In Columbus Schools

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Columbus Board of Education has approved a 3.25 per cent pay raise for teachers and school administrators, effective Jan. 19.

The board, under an agreement negotiated with the Columbus Education Association after a strike in January, had the option of granting the hike or going back to the bargaining table.

The raise will put beginning teacher salaries at $9,000 a year. The top pay for a teacher with a master's degree will be $17,280.

CHECKS SEEDLINGS — L. Franklin Wood, superintendent of the Zanesville State Nursery, checks conifer seedlings which will be available to Ohioans for planting in 1976. The state operates three nurseries in which hardwoods, conifers, and windbreak stock are grown.

Ohio Citizens have been offered a unique way to celebrate America's Bicentennial and provide a natural legacy for future generations at the same time.

Ohioans who own tracts of land may purchase tree seedlings at bargain prices from the Ohio Department of Natural Resources' Division of Forestry. The trees will be ready next spring in time for Bicentennial planting.

Landowners can choose from 24 species of trees including hardwoods, conifers, and windbreak stock grown at Ohio's state nurseries at Zanesville, Marietta, and Green Springs. However, the trees cannot be used on residential lots, for Christmas trees, or for ornamental purposes.

The minimum order is 500 seedlings in 250-plant bundles except for windbreak planting stock, which has a minimum order of 50 plants in multiples of 10 seedlings.

Cost per 1,000 seedlings is $20 if the order is picked-up at a state nursery, $24 for state truck delivery to a central point in Pickaway County or $28 for parcel post delivery to the landowner's house.

Windbreak stock is 12 cents if picked-up at a state tree nursery, 15 cents for state truck delivery and 17 cents for parcel post delivery.

In addition, black walnut seed nuts are available for $11 a bushel will call, $14 for state truck delivery and $16 for parcel post shipment.

Varieties available at the Green Springs Nursery include black alder, white ash, cottonwood, black locust, silver maple, red oak, white ash, sycamore, black walnut, hybrid poplar cuttings, buckeye, and butternut.

At the Marietta Nursery, Ohioans can get rose acacia, sweet gum, sugar maple, red maple, autumn olive, tulip tree, hybrid poplar cuttings, hemlock, red pine, Austrian pine, shortleaf pine, Virginia pine, white pine, Norway spruce, and arborvitae.

Varieties at the Zanesville Nursery are black alder, tulip tree, Austrian pine, pitch pine, red pine, white pine, Norway spruce, autumn olive, black locust, sugar maple, and hybrid poplar cuttings.

The hardwoods are all one year stock, the conifers are two year stock and the wind break planting are three-year transplants.

Order blanks and price lists for the seedlings are available at the local offices of the Forestry Division's service foresters, and the Soil and Water Conservation District office.

Information may also be obtained at the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office or by writing to the Division of Forestry, Ohio Department of Natural Resources, Fountain Square, Columbus, 43224.

Congress Foils Election Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress established the Federal Election Commission to monitor campaign practices, but lawmakers aren't showing much enthusiasm for some of the panel's suggestions.

Congress toppled the second consecutive FEC proposal on Wednesday as the House voted 257 to 148 to reject a rule that would have required all candidates for federal office to file their initial finance reports with the commission.

The vote dooms the regulation, as either house of Congress may veto a commission proposal.

Last month the Senate rejected a proposed regulation that would have required members of Congress to count certain office funds against campaign spending limits.

In both instances, congressional critics maintained that the FEC had overstepped its bounds and was trying to impose stiffer controls on federal elections than Congress had intended.

In Wednesday's action, House leaders of both parties denounced the commission's regulation. They argued that the House clerk and Senate secretary should continue receiving original spending and contribution reports of congressional candidates and not give up this right to the election commission.

The proposed rule would have required the FEC to furnish microfilm copies of the campaign documents to the respective congressional officers.

But opponents said such a measure would erode the power of Congress to keep originals of its own member's documents.

Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill of Massachusetts and House Administration Committee Chairman Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, suggested that the proposed regulation violated federal election law.

"I don't think the Federal Election Commission has any right whatsoever to pass regulations that break the laws of this Congress," O'Neill said in a floor speech.

Election Commission Chairman Thomas Curtis issued a statement denying that the regulation violated either the letter or spirit of the 1974 federal campaign financing law which the commission was established to enforce.

He said the House vote could undermine the attempt to have one centralized location where finance records can be promptly made public and audited.

"The commission is disappointed," he said.

Six Appear In Common Pleas Court In 2 Days

Four men appeared during Wednesday's session of Common Pleas Court and an additional two appeared this morning.

Today, David Lemaster, Columbus, appeared on an original charge of felonious assault on Julius Hulise. Lemaster was indicted for that charge by the September Grand Jury in its first session.

Upon entering into negotiations with the county prosecutor, Lemaster pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of attempted felonious assault. Judge William Ammer accepted the prosecutor's recommendation to reduce the charge and ordered a presentence report to be prepared on Lemaster by the Adult Parole Authority.

Also appearing this morning was Allen Billups, charged with two counts of grand theft and two counts of aggravated burglary. Judge Ammer sentenced Billups to two concurrent terms of 4-25 years at the Ohio Penitentiary on the burglary charges and two concurrent terms of 2-5 years on the theft charges. All terms will run concurrently with each other.

Robert J. Knoll, Dayton, appeared Wednesday morning on a charge of illegal procurement of a narcotic drug. He was sentenced to a term of 2-5 years at the Ohio State Reformatory for Men at Mansfield. The court suspended the sentence and placed Knoll on probation for five years.

A companion to the Knoll case was also heard during the mid-week session of court. John Jandell, also of Dayton, appeared on the same charge. The court also suspended Jandell's sentence of 2-5 years at the Mansfield Reformatory and placed him on probation for five years.

Inflation Fuels Ohio Uncertainty

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The greatest uncertainty facing the Ohio economy the next six months is the effect of inflation, the BancoOhio Corp. said Wednesday.

The Columbus-based holding company said inflation surges could abort Ohio's economic recovery by eroding recent improvements in real take-home pay.

It expects prices to rise at an annual rate ranging from six to seven per cent for the remainder of 1975 with a higher increase in 1976.

"Personal income in current dollars, however, is expected to rise at a slightly higher rate in 1975 and 1976 than was recorded in 1974," the firm said in a report prepared by a subsidiary, Midwest Econometrics.

Ohio was hit harder than the United States generally by the recession, which it called the worst since the 1930s. It said a lag in primary metals, electrical equipment and transportation industries has hurt Ohio employment.

It predicted Ohio would benefit from an increase in the demand of capital goods such as machine tools and metalworking equipment in 1976.

"At the present time, however, production levels are still low compared to what they were in 1974, and are unlikely to show any significant improvement in the remaining months of 1975," the report said.

Inflation Fuels Ohio Uncertainty

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The greatest uncertainty facing the Ohio economy the next six months is the effect of inflation, the BancOhio Corp. said Wednesday.

The Columbus-based holding company said inflation surges could abort Ohio's economic recovery by eroding recent improvements in real take-home pay.

It expects prices to rise at an annual rate ranging from six to seven per cent for the remainder of 1975 with a higher increase in 1976.

"Personal income in current dollars, however, is expected to rise at a slightly higher rate in 1975 and 1976 than was recorded in 1974," the firm said in a report prepared by a subsidiary, Midwest Econometrics.

"At the present time, however, production levels are still low compared to what they were in 1974, and are unlikely to show any significant improvement in the remaining months of 1975," the report said.

Williamsport News

By EILEEN EASTERDAY, Phone 986-3481

Lady Fortune has smiled the second time around for the John Fenneken family of Circleville and this makes a number of Williamsport folks quite happy.

Little Miss 1975 Pumpkin Show is six-year-old Lori Fenneken who is a granddaughter of Mrs. Chester (Edna) Picklesimer and the late Willard Fenneken of our village.

Two years ago little miss second attendant at the Pumpkin Show was Lori's sister Chris Fenneken. Both girls were sponsored by the North Court Barber Shop.

The big question now is whether Lady Fortune will bestow her favor on little Jana Fenneken in two more years. Jana, now four years old, will be eligible to compete in 1977 and I, for one, wish her all the best and hope she wins. I think that would be super terrific! I doubt there is any question about who will be her sponsor. The girls have several aunts, uncles and cousins wishing the best for them, too.

Two other Pumpkin Show winners from our area that I know of are little Cari Rodgers daughter of John and Connie Sue Rodgers and Brian Wayne Dollison, son of Ted and Kay Dollison. They both were in the very popular baby parade and contest. There's a lot of competition and no easy trick to become a winner.

Kay Dollison, by the way, is a surgical patient at Berger Hospital having been admitted during the weekend and undergone surgery on Monday.

The prize winning floats of Lawson's and Burger Chef were engineered and built by Marvie baby and Dolly Thompson assisted by Jim Cochenour. So once again our town was well represented at the big show.

Patty Reed was all smiles when we saw her briefly Saturday. She was on her way to the Columbus airport to meet son Terry and his two daughters who were flying in from Grand Forks, N.D. for a visit. Waiting eagerly at home to greet the visitors were Woody (old dad) and Melanie (young sis).

Creighton Anderson, his wife and daughter arrived Friday for a three day stay with his mother Mrs. Luther (Hattie) Anderson. The visiting Andersons drove in from Iowa.

The Rev. Richard Crosby was back in the pulpit Sunday and his wife Marybelle back at the piano at the Williamsport United Methodist Church after a fishing trip vacation. We understand the fishing results were fine. Also in the congregation Sunday were the Crosbys daughter and family, Sylvia and Wayne Phillips, Sandra and David of Antwerp.

The Phillips family had been a part of the fishing expedition. It was all enjoyable except for the hook in Rev. Crosby's finger. We have all heard of dog bites man, man bites dog stories, well in this case I guess it could be man hooks fish, fish hooks man.

The unnecessary rain caused our expected P.S. guests to cancel out but those of Marvie baby and Dolly came for the day Friday. Roger and Sue Beck, Stacey and Mike of Mt. Gilead and their houseguests Wayne and Pat Fry and three youngsters of Streator, Ill. drove down and saw the floats at the Fairgrounds building and little else of the Pumpkin Show but they did enjoy being with old friends from here since both couples were formerly associated with the Westfall school district. It was good to see them.

I talked so much of my favorite Friday evening eating establishment, The Valley House, that the Becks are planning to return in a couple of weeks or so and partake of the "seafood heaven".

Gee, there were a lot of us from our town the other night. Tom and Mabel Duvall and young Charley were at one table, Noah and Mabel List and several guests were at another table, Aulten and Dona Carter had a table and at my table were Mary Alice Greenwood (surely was glad she felt up to going) and our daughter Amy.

Papa Bill, in case any readers have wondered, does not care for seafood or buffet type dinners. There were several other Pickaway Countians, too.

I'll be a name dropper and toss in here that Dow West, principal of Logan Elm and his lovely wife Charlotte were taking advantage of the fact there was no football game scheduled for LE that night and were having dinner out. Mr. West speaks fluent Spanish and has been a real friend to all of our exchange students.

Our Deercreek Dam Days Festival queens were in the Fall Festival of Leaves parade at Bainbridge on Sunday and were as lovely as any who attended. On one car were Queen Sandra Drummond, her attendants Willa Coleman and Stephanie Snyder.

Another car rode pre-teen queen Dawn Renee Ott and little princess Terri Crist. Amy and I went down with Marabel Drummond and Joy Lynne. It was so cold that even I got cold and all those who know me well are going to be astonished because I am notorious for never getting cold.

Canasta Club met at the home of Jackie Hopper for October. Playing so well it was fantastic were Colleen Justice and yours truly who walked away with high and traveling respectively. Other prize winners were Mae Litter, low and Dorothy Carle, door.

Trying their best were Margene Looney, Esther Picklesimer, and Pearl Cochenour. Dorothy and Colleen were remembered by their secret sisters and received anniversary and birthday gifts.

According to the church bulletin our youth of the community will be rather busy in the upcoming week or so. First of all the UMYF have reserved the Saturdays in October and November as work days which means they will do most any job a person would want done and instead of charging a fee they will accept donations. Call either 986-6911, 986-3691 or 986-6404 to make the necessary arrangements.

Saturday, 6 p.m. until 8 p.m., all youngsters between the ages of 9 and 12 are invited to the Edmonds residence just north of town for an organizational youth group meeting. Sunday has been designated UNICEF Sunday. A contest of masked and costumed helpers will be held in the church annex at 5 p.m. Prizes of first and second will be awarded for most original, prettiest and ugliest.

The judging will be done on three group levels such as nursery and kindergarten, first, second and third grades and fourth, fifth and sixth grades. A mystery guest will be present and a prize awarded to the one who guesses the identity. A door to door canvass will follow with the young people collecting pennies for UNICEF.

Mayor Paul Long has established Oct. 30 from 6:30 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. as treat night for the youngsters of the Williamsport community. It is suggested that porch lights be turned on for the safety of all those concerned and especially if treats are to be distributed to the children.

Drivers of motor vehicles are cautioned to be extra alert for goblins and ghosts and to drive in the corporation limits SLOWLY! All the ghosts and goblins are reminded to be on the look out for cars and to cross streets CAREFULLY!

Many of our elderly citizens want to participate in the joy of giving treats to the children but find it difficult sometimes to answer the doorbell so often so instead they put the treat on the porch inviting each child to take one — please do just that — take one so that others might share. Make it a happy time for everyone.

On Oct. 31 beginning at 7 p.m. in the Pavilion will be the always looked forward to American Legion Post 618's annual Halloween mummies contest and party. Generous prizes of first, second and third will be awarded in the categories of prettiest, ugliest and most original.

Traditional refreshments of cider and doughnuts will be served by Post Commander Wilson Puckett and his Legionnaires. Visiting dignitary District First Vice Commander Jack Scott and his wife of Bainbridge will be present to assist in the judging. This is one event eagerly anticipated by young and old alike each year.

The hard working, community minded members of the 618 Legion Post will not rest on their laurels after the Halloween doings. Quite the contrary because on the very next day, Nov. 1 they will be preparing for their annual fish supper. Serving will begin at 5 p.m. and continue until 8 p.m.

The fish will be fried by Carl Hooks and Gene Schleich and everyone knows they super excel in the art of

The board approved bus drivers purchasing radios for their buses with the forthcoming of the policy governing this.

Trips to Ohio State University and Capital University were approved for the Future Teachers Association.

A one-month leave of absence was granted to Karen McCandlish, teacher in the district.

The board also accepted the list of substitute teachers as submitted by the Fairfield County Schools.

In final action during the meeting, a building rental policy was endorsed as in the past, subject to change.

frying fish. Better get your calendar out and make a note of all these dates because it really shapes up into a busy, busy week. Since the 4-H barbecue is scheduled for the 28th, oh wow! with so much for the "kids" to do there won't be any time left over for adult "things". What the heck — kid things are more fun anyhow.

With all I've written for this week I surely have not left anything out as I usually am prone to do.

Be with you again next week, be the Lord willing. Take care.

Think about: How good those fish will taste at the Legion Fish Fry.

Williamsport News

By EILEEN EASTERDAY, Phone 986-3481

Lady Fortune has smiled the second time around for the John Fenneken family of Circleville and this makes a number of Williamsport folks quite happy.

Little Miss 1975 Pumpkin Show is six-year-old Lori Fenneken who is a granddaughter of Mrs. Chester (Edna) Picklesimer and the late Willard Fenneken of our village.

Two years ago little miss second attendant at the Pumpkin Show was Lori's sister Chris Fenneken. Both girls were sponsored by the North Court Barber Shop.

The big question now is whether Lady Fortune will bestow her favor on little Jana Fenneken in two more years. Jana, now four years old, will be eligible to compete in 1977 and I, for one, wish her all the best and hope she wins. I think that would be super terrific! I doubt there is any question about who will be her sponsor. The girls have several aunts, uncles and cousins wishing the best for them, too.

Two other Pumpkin Show winners from our area that I know of are little Cari Rodgers daughter of John and Connie Sue Rodgers and Brian Wayne Dollison, son of Ted and Kay Dollison. They both were in the very popular baby parade and contest. There's a lot of competition and no easy trick to become a winner.

Kay Dollison, by the way, is a surgical patient at Berger Hospital having been admitted during the weekend and undergone surgery on Monday.

A Page Of Opinion

The State's White Elephant

Ohio's white elephant, the State Office Tower, continues to be in the news, due to financial problems.

We are inclined to support Sen. Max Dennis, R-10, Wilmington, in his proposal to pay off the debt on the building. That debt could be paid if Gov. James A. Rhodes wins voter approval of his capital improvements bond issue.

The 41-story building, which has a debt of $83 million, has been a bone of contention since it was built. Many state officers have fought moving into the building because of the rental cost.

Sen. Dennis believes paying off the loan on the building would save an additional $50 million in interest. Fifty million dollars in interest on $83 million does not sound like a bargain, even though the money was borrowed from the workmen's compensation fund.

Indeed, that fund could use the money itself. The head of the fund has already indicated that assessments to employers will rise sharply next year.

All of which brings us back to the basics.

First of all, we question whether the state needed such a grandiose building when a simpler structure could have been built for less.

Secondly, we question the advisability of building a structure through shuffling of funds among state agencies with large paybacks.

And finally, we wonder why provisions was not made to build up funds for construction, since expansion is a foregone conclusion in any state which has growth.

Start Where The Child Is

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — The establishment of TV Family Viewing Hours, before 9 p.m. (no violence or dirty words or nudity), was a cute gesture to palliate the parental pressure groups of America . . . but has it succeeded in protecting our children?

Hardly, it seems. The kiddies are simply staying up later now, to catch their favorite shows.

Take tonight, or any Monday night. After youngsters might have been assumed to be safely in bed, there still will be 11 million children, from age 2 to 11, watching the programs from 9 to 9:30. In the half-hour between 9:30 and 10, there will be 6.8 million fans under 12 still looking. From 10:30 to 11, the number of children will dwindle to 5.6 million (even schoolkids get saturated and sleepy sometime).

So what else is new? Family Hours or no Family Hours, the American child will succeed in watching pretty much what he wants to watch — to the extent that, by the time the average youngster finishes high school, he'll have spent 10,000 hours in the classroom, and 14,000 hours before his TV.

Should we read these statistics and weep?

Not necessarily. Current thinking among some enlightened educators is that we should begin taking an active, positive attitude toward television: rather than haranguing the young to turn off their sets, how about using TV as a bridge to the classics, the humanities, and the values of life?

The educator John Dewey urged, "Start where the child is," in providing knowledge. If a child is constantly in front of the TV set, then, that's the place to start.

Teaching and parenting should not be passive viewing experiences. They must be active. Thus, if parents begin watching TV with their children — asking questions, requiring the youngsters to participate and respond — television might become what it holds the promise of being: a constructive, instructive medium. Even cops and robbers can be a lesson in values, rather than violence. Situation comedies can provide an insight into human relations. MASH can lead into an appreciation of Molier!

Most parents can't accomplish TV-teaching alone. A manual titled "Teachers Guides To Television" (P.O. Box 564, Lenox Hill Station, N.Y. N.Y., 10021), therefore, provides guidelines. It lists upcoming programs suitable for the purpose of watching in conjunction with discussions — with synopses of the shows, and suggested questions and philosophical discourses which could make the program relevant to children of various ages. "It takes a little work on the part of a parent or teacher, to be sure; but what is there about raising and educating a child that doesn't?" says Edward Stanley, president of Teachers Guides.

The idea is that if we "start where the child is," we can use TV to lead a child from canned laughter and vicarious violence to a deeper understanding of himself and his potential. Examples:

If a student loves MASH (Friday, 8:30-9) and studies the personalities of the broadly farcical cast of characters, he can compare the satire with the Dickensian grotesques such as "Scrooge" (NBC, Dec. 22, 8-10). Archie Bunker in "All in the Family" (Mondays, 9-9:30) can not only be a lesson in the meaning of frustration, but the stereotype characters can help children relate to Synge's "Playboy of the Western World" (PSB, Dec. 11, 9-11), whose characters are as opinionated as Archie.

Can "Phyllis" (Mondays, 8:30-9) help us understand Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" (PBS, Nov. 20, 9-11)? Or are Maude, Rhoda or Mary Tyler Moore more similar. And where does Nora, who slammed the door of Ibsen's "The Doll's House," fit in? Oh, yes — and how about "Kate McShane" (Wednesdays, 10-11)? How does she compare with Portia? Well, you'll have to read Shakespeare to find out.

The "Teachers Guides" are crammed with provocative analogies between popular TV programs and the classics of literature and drama, as well as history. Can one compare the moral dilemmas of a leader like Marlowe's "Edward II" (PBS) with the underworld gangsters in "The Godfather" (NBC)? You bet. It's as easy as relating the idiosyncrasies of "The Six Million Dollar Man" with those of "Macbeth." All you need is an educator to tell you how.

The idea of urging children to use TV as an exploration into deeper insight, rather than as a flickering fling into escapism, is new and holds great potential. It may be our last hope, at any rate. The children apparently will manage to watch TV, whether the parents like it or not, so the motto may as well be: "If you can't fight 'em, join 'em in front of the set. And make them think about what they're seeing. . ."

Business World

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A 20-year-old plan for redistributing the nation's wealth has suddenly caught the fancy of corporate executives trying to raise cash or sell part of their company.

It's called ESOP — Employee Stock Ownership Plan. It allows employees to acquire free stock in the company they work for, while their employers can use it to borrow money at greatly reduced cost.

Although Louis Kelso, a San Francisco lawyer and economic theorist, has been advocating ESOPs for years, they were given only scant notice until Congress recently adjusted the tax laws to make them more attractive.

"It has caught on to such a degree that the queries have sort of inundated this office," said Wayne Thevenot, executive assistant to Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La. Long became intrigued with ESOPs after meeting Kelso and began promoting them with legislation.

The surge of interest has been accompanied by criticism, however. Some financial experts warn of hidden costs and say ESOPs are not ideally suited for all companies.

Here's how an ESOP works:

A company forms an ESOP trust, a legal set-up under which a person takes care of property for others, in this case the employees. The company gives shares of its stock to the trust, which then allocates them among the employees according to the amount of their wages.

Contributions to the ESOP are tax-deductible. Under a recent tax law amendment, companies can increase the amount of tax credit they receive for investment expense, if the increase goes to the ESOP.

"Anybody looking for an investment tax credit had to find out what it was all about," Thevenot said.

A variation on the basic model, and the purpose Kelso envisioned for ESOPs, works this way:

The ESOP trust borrows money from a bank and uses it to buy stock in the company. The company uses the money to expand its operations or cover current expenses, and periodically pays installment on the amount it received to the trust. The trust uses those payments to pay back its loan.

The bank gets interest on the loan, the employees get stock without charge, and the company gets money to expand. Essentially, the company has borrowed money from the bank, but it passed through the trust first.

The difference is this: a company repays conventional bank loans from after-tax dollars — meaning a company in a 50 per cent tax bracket has to earn $2 million plus interest to repay a $1 million loan. But the installments it pays to an ESOP come from pretax dollars, and thus it needs to raise only $1 million plus interest to repay the loan.

John Cuniff is on vacation.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, Oct. 23, the 296th day of 1975. There are 69 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1917, American troops saw their first action on the Western Front in World War I, in fighting near Lunenburg, France.

On this date:

In 1776, in the Revolutionary War, General George Washington's troops withdrew from the island of Manhattan.

In 1925, 25,000 women marched in New York, demanding the right to vote.

In 1929, stock market prices began to plunge in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

In 1942, in World War II, the British launched a big offensive against Axis offices at El Alamein in Egypt.

Ten years ago: Dr. Martin Luther King said in Paris he would cut short a trip in Europe to return to Atlanta to organize a protest against the acquittal of a Ku Klux Klansman in the death of a white civil rights worker.

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon, speaking at the U.N., called on the Soviets to join in a U.S.-Soviet competition to lead the world along a path of peace and progress.

One year ago: U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger arrived in Moscow to test the Soviet spirit of detente under the Ford Administration.

Today's birthdays: Television personality Johnny Carson is 50 years old. Architect Paul Rudolph is 57.

Thought for today: Fortune favors the audacious — Erasmus, Dutch scholar about 1466-1536.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, George Washington's headquarters at Cambridge, Mass. learned from a British deserter that scurvy was sweeping British forces in Boston.

Daylight Time Set To End On Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clocks across most of the nation will be set back one hour at 2 a.m. Sunday as the country ends eight months of Daylight Saving Time.

The change will occur in all states and U.S. possessions except Arizona, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the eastern time zone portion of Indiana. Those areas do not observe DST.

The nation will observe regular time for six months unless Congress agrees to a recommendation by the Department of Transportation to observe only four months of regular time.

For two years, the nation has been on an experimental schedule of eight months of daylight time and four months of regular time. However, the legislation setting up that experiment has expired and unless Congress passes new legislation, the country will revert to the six months daylight time-six months regular time schedule used in previous years.

DST will start again on Sunday, April 26, 1976, if Congress does nothing to change the schedule. It will start on the last Sunday in February if the recommendation of the Transportation Department is passed. To date, no such legislation has been introduced, the department said.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I find that my sense of taste seems to vary from time to time. I have tried to learn the reason for it, but I cannot. Is this a common complaint?

Miss E. E., Tenn.

Dear Miss E.:

The complaint is not a common one, but it is occasionally brought to the attention of doctors.

Interesting scientific work is being done in an effort to understand the subtleties of taste.

Dr. Herman Diamant, of Sweden, has been doing many interesting experiments on taste, in animals and in humans. He has found that the taste buds work in an interesting way. When taste buds pick up a flavor, they send tiny electrical impulses to the brain. Here, in a memory center, flavors and tastes are remembered and later recognized again. It is believed that the stronger the flavor, the more sensitive is the taste sensation.

It is said that taste buds may be altered by drugs, alcohol and tobacco.

Are the scare statistics about venereal disease exaggerated in the schools and on TV? Our teenage children scoff at the way this is hammered into their heads.

Mrs. J. V., Calif.

Dear Mrs. V.:

With the help of parents and educators, public health officials can carry the message of venereal disease to the adolescent, young adult and adult.

These statistics are not "exaggerated," nor are they meant to "scare." In fact, the statistics released to the public do not reflect the even greater number of cases of gonorrhea and syphilis that actually exist, deliberately avoid introducing unnecessary fear to disturb their psychological balance.

Yet, in this instance I must, in fact, repeat that a venereal disease epidemic exists. All of us must work to reduce this threat to mankind.

Gas Emergency Powers Pondered

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A state agency could dictate the distribution and uses of natural gas under a crisis management plan adopted Tuesday by the Ohio Energy Emergency Commission.

The plan allows a "natural gas crisis" to be declared. The declaration would confer emergency powers on the commission to direct reallocations of natural gas.

expires Dec. 31, the power will vest in the new Energy Resource and Development Agency. The crisis declaration would be made by the governor.

The plan would be put into use if the commission or the agency found that the shortage of natural gas in Ohio was severe enough to threaten life, property or vital services.

The plan would go beyond public utilities' curtailment plans, which would shut off low-priority gas users if a major shortage develops.

Commission Chairman James Duerk said he couldn't predict if the emergency plan will be needed this winter.

"It depends on the natural gas supply and the weather," he said. "We certainly hope we don't have to reach that point. But we have to be prepared."

The plan would make the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, normally the state's chief natural gas regulatory body, an agent of the commission or agency.

While the emergency declaration was in effect, the emergency body would direct the reallocation of gas and the PUCO would issue orders to implement that directive.

The emergency body could "allocate existing supplies among users, impose restrictions on the use of energy or prohibit certain nonessential activities which consume energy," the plan explains.

The original draft of the plan also would have allowed the plan to be put into effect if "severe adverse economic impact" was imminent.

That section, however was given a lower priority upon the urgings of Francis Wright, president of East Ohio Gas Co.

Wright, a commission member, argued that economic impact could be used too easily to shift gas from one plant to another, merely spreading the crisis around.

"Allocating gas from one part of the state to the other won't create another cubic foot," Wright noted.

He insisted that the emergency powers be reserved for threats to life and property, a stance the commission adopted.

Even Churches Have Dropouts

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Even the church has dropouts.

"It's just not challenging," explains Gregg Gibson, assistant minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Franklin, Ohio.

Gibson, who is studying law at the University of Dayton, plans a career in law or politics when he leaves the pulpit.

"I just can't see myself writing sermons, visiting the sick and organizing church suppers for the rest of my life," Gibson said.

Gibson's thoughts are close to Alan Greene, who abandoned plans to be a rabbi in order to become a youth counsellor.

"I feel a rabbi is for the most part just a religious functionary," Green said. "The rabbi is set in a role. He's placed in a position sort of above the people. My personality wouldn't let me do that."

Both Gibson and Greene say they have retained their religious faith. But neither feel they can accomplish what they want to do in the formal-ministry.

Many in Ohio, like Gibson and Greene, contend the ministry is like sitting on an exercise bike and going nowhere.

Gibson, 28, and Greene, 24, were both college activists. They said they wanted to continue to work toward social and political reform through the ministry. Both were disappointed.

"I really saw the church as an agent of social change, much more so than the law," Gibson said. "I'm basically an activist type of person, a doer, and as a minister I find there's very little that I can really do."

"I would like some credentials that will allow me to do some more concrete things with my life," he said.

Greene, a Boston native, attended Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati mainly because he has relatives in Dayton. After two years, he decided to switch to social work.

He is now studying for a master's degree in corrections at Xavier University. He is also working at Emmanuel House, a halfway house for former prison inmates.

"I went into the rabbinate at the time of Watergate and the end of Vietnam," Green said. "I stood in demonstrations, leftist political demonstrations, and I felt I could fulfill myself in the same way in the rabbinate. I found out that's not true."

After only a month as a youth counselor, Green feels he has found his niche.

"I feel I'm doing something important now," he said. "I find myself becoming much more realistic. There's a kid 17 years old with a fourth grade reading level. I feel I'm doing something just by helping him to learn to read."

Even Churches Have Dropouts

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Even the church has dropouts.

"It's just not challenging," explains Gregg Gibson, assistant minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Franklin, Ohio.

Gibson, who is studying law at the University of Dayton, plans a career in law or politics when he leaves the pulpit.

"I just can't see myself writing sermons, visiting the sick and organizing church suppers for the rest of my life," Gibson said.

Gibson's thoughts are close to Alan Greene, who abandoned plans to be a rabbi in order to become a youth counsellor.

"I feel a rabbi is for the most part just a religious functionary," Green said. "The rabbi is set in a role. He's placed in a position sort of above the people. My personality wouldn't let me do that."

Both Gibson and Greene say they have retained their religious faith. But neither feel they can accomplish what they want to do in the formal-ministry.

Many in Ohio, like Gibson and Greene, contend the ministry is like sitting on an exercise bike and going nowhere.

Gibson, 28, and Greene, 24, were both college activists. They said they wanted to continue to work toward social and political reform through the ministry. Both were disappointed.

"I really saw the church as an agent of social change, much more so than the law," Gibson said. "I'm basically an activist type of person, a doer, and as a minister I find there's very little that I can really do."

"I would like some credentials that will allow me to do some more concrete things with my life," he said.

Greene, a Boston native, attended Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati mainly because he has relatives in Dayton. After two years, he decided to switch to social work.

He is now studying for a master's degree in corrections at Xavier University. He is also working at Emmanuel House, a halfway house for former prison inmates.

"I went into the rabbinate at the time of Watergate and the end of Vietnam," Green said. "I stood in demonstrations, leftist political demonstrations, and I felt I could fulfill myself in the same way in the rabbinate. I found out that's not true."

After only a month as a youth counselor, Green feels he has found his niche.

"I feel I'm doing something important now," he said. "I find myself becoming much more realistic. There's a kid 17 years old with a fourth grade reading level. I feel I'm doing something just by helping him to learn to read."

Housing Issue Least Controversial

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Issue 4, the governor's housing support program, goes before voters on Nov. 4 as the least controversial of his four-part economic recovery package.

The issue is a constitutional amendment which would give the state authority to assist municipalities and housing developers to build or renovate housing and health care facilities.

The program would be funded by revenue bonds which would be repaid through housing sales and mortgage payments. If enough money is not raised through those sources, the state would not be bound to use other state revenues, though it could at the General Assembly's discretion.

The issue involves no tax increase. Most of the opponents of the other three parts of the economic recovery package either support or take no position on the housing amendment.

In large part, the amendment merely clarifies the authority of the existing Ohio Housing Development Board.

That board was given the legislative authority to issue up to $1 billion in revenue bonds for housing. But the board has issued no bonds, mainly because there is a legal question whether the General Assembly could legally grant that much power.

Issue 4 would legitimize the board's authority.

Supporters say the issue is needed because "the Ohio housing industry is in its worst slump since the Great Depression."

Housing starts have dropped 51.2 per cent in the last four years, supporters say, and unemployment in the industry is above 50 per cent in some areas. At the same time, the average cost of a new house has risen 52.2 per cent, putting it out of reach of most home buyers.

Supporters say the state could help by borrowing money to finance the industry. Since state bonds are tax-free to buyers, the state would pay a lower interest rate than private borrowers.

This savings could be passed on to the developers, supporters say, and that in turn would lower the cost of housing to the average buyer.

Supporters point to the successful housing authority in Michigan. In the past four years, supporters say, that state has built 15,393 housing units, with another 14,890 in the works.

At the same time, 22,000 jobs per year have been created through Michigan's program supporters say.

The effectiveness of the program remains a question, however, because of recent developments in the bond market. The breaking point came when the giant Urban Development Corporation in New York collapsed.

UDC issued the same type of bonds as Issue 4 proposes, and once was considered the sweetheart of the bond market. As the UDC collapse drew nearer, however, the value of the bonds dropped.

When the UDC defaulted, governmental housing authorities elsewhere faced a tightening bond market. Bond buyers wanted higher interest rates to compensate for what they saw as a greater risk of default.

Issue 4 opponents have noted that if the interest rates on the proposed bonds goes too high, the advantage of government borrowing is lost and the housing industry would be in the same shape it is now.

Critics also have questioned provisions in the amendment which would allow use of the authority to finance nursing homes and health care facilities.

The critics say those provisions may siphon housing project money off as contractors turn to nursing homes, which are more profitable and less risky.

The Ohio AFL-CIO, which opposes the other three administration proposals, supports the housing issue, although saying the nursing home provision is "not a desirable feature of this issue."

But the million-member labor organization, citing an acute shortage of good housing, said that "the good features...outweigh the nursing home question."

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Consumer Prices Up Half Per Cent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices increased five-tenths of 1 per cent in September, largely because of higher prices for transportation, education, medical services, utilities and clothing, the government said today.

But for the first time since early this year, there was a decline in food prices at supermarkets — a drop of two-tenths of 1 per cent since August. The Labor Department said prices were down sharply for fresh fruits, vegetables and beef.

The September figures mean consumer prices are increasing at an annual rate of 6 per cent, which is below the 8 per cent annual inflation rate forecast by the government. For the first nine months of 1975 consumer prices have increased 5.1 per cent, and for the 12-month period ending in September they increased 7.8 per cent.

The Labor Department said its consumer price index in September stood at 163.6 of the 1967 average of 100, meaning it cost $163.60 last month to buy the same goods that cost $100 in 1967.

The September price report showed that the rate of inflation, while still high, is continuing to decline from the double-digit levels of a year ago.

Consumer prices had increased two-tenths of 1 per cent in August, which was considered unusually low.

The Labor Department said prices of goods other than foods increased three-tenths of 1 per cent in September, in part because prices of 1975 model cars did not decline as much as new car prices usually do at the close of the model year.

Prices of 1976 models will be reflected in the October price index, the department said.

Prices of fuel oil and coal jumped 1.3 per cent in September, reflecting a steady upward increase of utilities costs.

The cost of services increased 1 per cent during September, the biggest increase in a year. The Labor Department said major causes were an increase in New York City transit fares, which helped push over-all transportation costs up by 3 per cent, and a rise of nine-tenths of 1 per cent in medical care.

The department said physicians' fees increased 1.1 per cent in September, the biggest rise in six months, while hospital service charges rose seven-tenths of 1 per cent.

In the food area, grocery store prices fell two-tenths of 1 per cent, but the decline was offset by a seven-tenths of 1 per cent increase in restaurant costs, which pushed the over-all food index up by one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Hatch Act Revisions Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's 2.8 million employees, banned since 1936 from running for partisan office or taking part in others' political campaigns, will have those restrictions lifted if a measure pending before the Senate becomes law.

The House overwhelmingly passed and sent to the Senate on Tuesday a bill that would make sweeping changes in the Hatch Act. That law limiting political activity by federal workers was passed when the federal bureaucracy began to burgeon during President Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration.

The measure approved by the House includes provisions that seek to protect federal employees from pressures by superiors and others to contribute funds or to work in election campaigns.

The Ford administration opposes the bill, and Republicans said the President may veto it. The House vote was 288 to 119, however, more than the two-thirds needed to override a presidential veto.

It is widely believed that most federal civilian employees are registered Democrats, but no official figures were available.

The Civil Service Commission also opposes the bill, but it has received vigorous support from some labor groups, particularly government workers' groups.

The House Republican Policy Committee said the bill would "encourage the participation of federal employees in political machines ... (and) subject activities and pay ... to the demands of union bosses."

But proponents said it would restore first-class citizenship to government workers. They charged that the Hatch Act represented over-reaction to political abuses of long ago.

The House attached an amendment that would require employees who run for office to take a 90-day leave of absence from their jobs.

The bill, which also applies to employees of the semi-independent Postal Service but not to members of the Armed Services, prohibits cam-

Consumer Prices Up Half Per Cent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices increased fiftenths of 1 per cent in September, largely because of higher prices for transportation, education, medical services, utilities and clothing, the government said today.

But for the first time since early this year, there was a decline in food prices at supermarkets — a drop of two-tenths of 1 per cent since August. The Labor Department said prices were down sharply for fresh fruits, vegetables and beef.

The September figures mean consumer prices are increasing at an annual rate of 6 per cent, which is below the 8 per cent annual inflation rate forecast by the government. For the first nine months of 1975 consumer prices have increased 5.1 per cent, and for the 12-month period ending in September they increased 7.8 per cent.

The Labor Department said its consumer price index in September stood at 163.6 of the 1967 average of 100, meaning it cost $163.60 last month to buy the same goods that cost $100 in 1967.

The September price report showed that the rate of inflation, while still high, is continuing to decline from the double-digit levels of a year ago.

Consumer prices had increased two-tenths of 1 per cent in August, which was considered unusually low.

The Labor Department said prices of goods other than foods increased three-tenths of 1 per cent in September, in part because prices of 1975 model cars did not decline as much as new car prices usually do at the close of the model year.

Prices of 1976 models will be reflected in the October price index, the department said.

Prices of fuel oil and coal jumped 1.3 per cent in September, reflecting a steady upward increase of utilities costs.

The cost of services increased 1 per cent during September, the biggest increase in a year. The Labor Department said major causes were an increase in New York City transit fares, which helped push over-all transportation costs up by 3 per cent, and a rise of nine-tenths of 1 per cent in medical care.

The department said physicians' fees increased 1.1 per cent in September, the biggest rise in six months, while hospital service charges rose seventenths of 1 per cent.

In the food area, grocery store prices fell two-tenths of 1 per cent, but the decline was offset by a seven-tenths of 1 per cent increase in restaurant costs, which pushed the over-all food index up by one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Hatch Act Revisions Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's 2.8 million employees, banned since 1936 from running for partisan office or taking part in others' political campaigns, will have those restrictions lifted if a measure pending before the Senate becomes law.

The House overwhelmingly passed and sent to the Senate on Tuesday a bill that would make sweeping changes in the Hatch Act. That law limiting political activity by federal workers was passed when the federal bureaucracy began to burgeon during President Franklin D. Roosevelt's administration.

The measure approved by the House includes provisions that seek to protect federal employees from pressures by superiors and others to contribute funds or to work in election campaigns.

The Ford administration opposes the bill, and Republicans said the President may veto it. The House vote was 288 to 119, however, more than the two-thirds needed to override a presidential veto.

It is widely believed that most federal civilian employees are registered Democrats, but no official figures were available.

The Civil Service Commission also opposes the bill, but it has received vigorous support from some labor groups, particularly government workers' groups.

The House Republican Policy Committee said the bill would "encourage the participation of federal employees in political machines ... (and) subject activities and pay ... to the demands of union bosses."

But proponents said it would restore first-class citizenship to government workers. They charged that the Hatch Act represented over-reaction to political abuses of long ago.

The House attached an amendment that would require employees who run for office to take a 90-day leave of absence from their jobs.

AT BOOKS IN THE CHILDREN'S LIBRARY

Movie stars are not the only ones that receive awards! The Children's Room at your Public Library has Caldecott Award winning books! The Caldecott Award is given for the most distinguished American picture book.

This year's Caldecott winner is "Arrow to the Sun" by Gerald McDermott. The story is a Pueblo Indian tale about a boy who came from the sun. The illustrations in this book are vivid, bright, and imaginative — everything one would expect from a Caldecott winner! The child can understand this book through the pictures once the story has been read to him.

"A Tree is Nice" by Janice May Udry is also a winner. The theme of this book is how good it is to have a tree around. Some of the reasons are funny, while others are just what a child must think of a tree. This book would be enjoyed by any child for the colorful illustrations as well as the story.

An African tale, "A Story a Story" retold by Gail E. Haley is about how stories came to be. This tale tells how small, defenseless men or animals outwit others and succeed against great odds. This book contains some African words that can be understood by their sounds.

The quiet fun and sweetness of a boy's small adventures in deep snow is presented in "The Snowy Day" by

Rescue 2 From Wilds

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—The helicopter pilot who found two Akron men who were lost while on a fishing trip in Canada says he discovered the men after he saw the word "help" spelled out on the ground.

The flier said he found Ronald Frese, 28, and Carl Norman, 36, at the edge of a cliff. The men had spelled out the word with logs stripped of their bark.

The men were found in a heavily wooded area about 3½ miles from their camp on Joesle Lake, Ont.

The two men had nothing to eat during their ordeal and were suffering from malnutrition and dehydration, he said. The pilot, a member of the provincial police, said the men appeared to have survived in relatively good shape.

The hunters were resting in Lady Dunn Hospital at Wawa, Ont, he said.

Authorities said the two men were lost for five days from the day they left camp. They had flown to the lake Oct. 9 by chartered plane. The search began when they failed to return to camp as scheduled Oct. 17.

Ezra Jack Keats. The story shows how children can enjoy being by themselves. A good book with large pictures and few words for reading.

"The Little House" by Virginia Lee Burton is a story about a well loved house that was built to last for many generations. The little house lived in the country, but was curious about life in the city. After the house has some city adventures it again welcomes the quiet country life. A good story your child is sure to love.

Last year the Caldecott Award winner was "Duffy and the Devil" a Cornish tale retold by Harve Zemach. In this tale a squire brings a maid home to help his housekeeper with the spinning and knitting. The maid can neither spin nor knit and so strikes a bargain with the devil. This story is a variation of that much told tale Rumpelstiltskin. A fun story as well as interesting illustrations make this a book certain to please.

As you can tell, there is good reading for your child in the Children's Room. Now that Pumpkin Show is over, why not continue the fun with a good book?

WASHINGTON (AP)—Standard Oil Co. of Ohio (Sohio) appealed to the Federal Power Commission Wednesday for an exemption from a sharp natural gas curtailment this winter so that its wholly-owned subsidiary Visitron can continue to produce ammonia fertilizer at its Lima, Ohio, plant.

Sohio and Visitron were told by Columbia Gas of Ohio, Inc., to brace for cutbacks in allocations of more than 60 per cent from Nov. 1 to March 31, 1976.

Sohio contends it needs a minimum of 50 million cubic feet of natural gas daily, while Columbia said it can expect to receive only about 27 million cubic feet.

Each side presented its side at an FPC hearing.

Columbia Gas maintains it cannot provide the "extraordinary relief" Sohio is asking because of a statewide curtailment plan submitted to the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

That plan is designed to minimize the effects of the natural gas shortage on residential customers, but calls for cutting off all supplies to large industrial boiler fuel loads, 64 per cent of supplies to remaining industrial loads like Sohio and 40 per cent of supplies to large commercial users during the winter months.

Visitron Vice President Donald R. Brinkley, who manages the Lima plant's chemical business, conceded his firm has located an alternate, although uncertain source of natural gas.

Brinkley said Visitron has bought intrastate natural gas in Texas that could supply up to 40 million cubic feet of gas a day during the winter months. But the gas would have to be transported in interstate pipelines, a move requiring FPC approval.

Brinkley said if permission to ship the gas is granted, the petition for relief will be modified or withdrawn. The companies said they went out of state to obtain additional supplies because "we do not expect that it will be possible in the foreseeable future to purchase on an intrastate basis in Ohio those quantities of gas required to run the complex or to replace volumes under Columbia's projected curtailments," Brinkley said.

The Lima complex consists of a refinery that has been converted to alternate fuels, two ammonia plants, an industrial chemicals plant and a nitrogen plant. The smaller ammonia plant has been offered for sale because of the natural gas shortage. The company said about 62 per cent of the 376,000 tons of ammonia expected to be produced at Lima this year will be used for agriculture.

Seek Gas Supply For Lima Plant

WASHINGTON (AP)—Standard Oil Co. of Ohio (Sohio) appealed to the Federal Power Commission Wednesday for an exemption from a sharp natural gas curtailment this winter so that its wholly-owned subsidiary Visitron can continue to produce ammonia fertilizer at its Lima, Ohio, plant.

Sohio and Visitron were told by Columbia Gas of Ohio, Inc., to brace for cutbacks in allocations of more than 60 per cent from Nov. 1 to March 31, 1976.

Sohio contends it needs a minimum of 50 million cubic feet of natural gas daily, while Columbia said it can expect to receive only about 27 million cubic feet.

Each side presented its side at an FPC hearing.

Columbia Gas maintains it cannot provide the "extraordinary relief" Sohio is asking because of a statewide curtailment plan submitted to the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

That plan is designed to minimize the effects of the natural gas shortage on residential customers, but calls for cutting off all supplies to large industrial boiler fuel loads, 64 per cent of supplies to remaining industrial loads like Sohio and 40 per cent of supplies to large commercial users during the winter months.

Visitron Vice President Donald R. Brinkley, who manages the Lima plant's chemical business, conceded his firm has located an alternate, although uncertain source of natural gas.

Brinkley said Visitron has bought intrastate natural gas in Texas that could supply up to 40 million cubic feet of gas a day during the winter months. But the gas would have to be transported in interstate pipelines, a move requiring FPC approval.

Brinkley said if permission to ship the gas is granted, the petition for relief will be modified or withdrawn. The companies said they went out of

AT BOOKS IN THE CHILDREN'S LIBRARY

Movie stars are not the only ones that receive awards! The Children's Room at your Public Library has Caldecott Award winning books! The Caldecott Award is given for the most distinguished American picture book.

This year's Caldecott winner is "Arrow to the Sun" by Gerald McDermott. The story is a Pueblo Indian tale about a boy who came from the sun. The illustrations in this book are vivid, bright, and imaginative — everything one would expect from a Caldecott winner! The child can understand this book through the pictures once the story has been read to him.

"A Tree is Nice" by Janice May Udry is also a winner. The theme of this book is how good it is to have a tree around. Some of the reasons are funny, while others are just what a child must think of a tree. This book would be enjoyed by any child for the colorful illustrations as well as the story.

An African tale, "A Story a Story" retold by Gail E. Haley is about how stories came to be. This tale tells how small, defenseless men or animals outwit others and succeed against great odds. This book contains some African words that can be understood by their sounds.

The quiet fun and sweetness of a boy's small adventures in deep snow is presented in "The Snowy Day" by

Rescue 2 From Wilds

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—The helicopter pilot who found two Akron men who were lost while on a fishing trip in Canada says he discovered the men after he saw the word "help" spelled out on the ground.

The flier said he found Ronald Frese, 28, and Carl Norman, 36, at the edge of a cliff. The men had spelled out the word with logs stripped of their bark.

The men were found in a heavily wooded area about 3½ miles from their camp on Josele Lake, Ont.

The two men had nothing to eat during their ordeal and were suffering from malnutrition and dehydration, he said. The pilot, a member of the provincial police, said the men appeared to have survived in relatively good shape.

The hunters were resting in Lady Dunn Hospital at Wawa, Ont., he said. Authorities said the two men were lost for five days from the day they left camp. They had flown to the lake Oct. 9 by chartered plane. The search began when they failed to return to camp as scheduled Oct. 17.

Ezra Jack Keats. The story shows how children can enjoy being by themselves. A good book with large pictures and few words for reading.

"The Little House" by Virginia Lee Burton is a story about a well loved house that was built to last for many generations. The little house lived in the country, but was curious about life in the city. After the house has some city adventures it again welcomes the quiet country life. A good story your child is sure to love.

Last year the Caldecott Award winner was "Duffy and the Devil" a Cornish tale retold by Harve Zemach. In this tale a squire brings a maid home to help his housekeeper with the spinning and knitting. The maid can neither spin nor knit and so strikes a bargain with the devil. This story is a variation of that much told tale Rumpelstiltskin. A fun story as well as interesting illustrations make this a book certain to please.

As you can tell, there is good reading for your child in the Children's Room. Now that Pumpkin Show is over, why not continue the fun with a good book?

Chronic Cough Is Sign Of Trouble

A cough that lasts is a sign of trouble. A cough you can't shake can be a symptom of the lung disease called chronic bronchitis.

The symptoms are a cough that lasts for at least three months, comes and goes with colds, and recurs for at least two years in a row. Attention must be paid to that kind of cough.

Medical treatment plus quitting smoking usually can clear up the symptoms. If it is untreated, however, the disease can mean serious trouble. Chronic bronchitis can be and often is a forerunner of pulmonary emphysema. Emphysema is one of the fastest growing causes of death in the U.S. today. In this severe lung disease, the walls of the air sacs rip and tear.

Stale air gets trapped in the lungs, and the lungs become overinflated. For the person with emphysema, even the effort required to tie a shoelace can be exhausting. The flow of blood in the lungs is disrupted by the changes caused in emphysema. The heart has to pump harder and may become enlarged. Death due to a damaged heart is often an end result of emphysema. There is no cure for emphysema. However, doctors can prescribe some ways to live easier with the disease. To stop smoking is of vital importance. The lung association is working very hard to alert people to the dangers of lung diseases. See the family doctor for a cough or a breathing problem. Much research and work is being done to detect lung disease earlier and to find better treatments. Contributions to the Christmas Seal Campaign support this effort.

Two weeks after 18,385 letters of appeal and Christmas Seals were mailed, contributions totaling $10,590.00 have been received from 3,493 persons and places of business. The South Central Ohio Lung Assn. is located at 121 W. Main St. Chillicothe. The lung association serves the six counties of Fayette, Jackson, Lawrence, Pickaway, Pike and Ross.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

He's Turned Off When Lover Cools Affair

DEAR ABBY: I need a woman's viewpoint, and you're the woman. Last summer I became very much attracted to a middle-aged, married woman. We met socially. (I'm a middle-aged, married man.) She felt the same way as I did, and it soon developed into a most wonderful, loving, intimate relationship.

We'd meet twice a week at a motel very discreetly-and we'd talk on the phone everyday. We both admitted we had never known such love and happiness, but being sensible people, we didn't consider breaking up our respective families. (We both have children.)

Oddly enough, my wife and I and this woman and her husband were a most compatible foursome.

Everything was heavenly, then suddenly for no apparent reason she said it was over-and she refused to meet me again! She gave no reason for her sudden change of heart. She said that she still "felt" the same but that we couldn't continue our affair.

I've called her and begged for some explanation. She cut the conversation short and said, "It's over."

Abby, I really care about this woman. Doesn't she owe me an explanation? What would make a woman terminate an affair in this abrupt manner?

MISSING HER IN ARIZONA

DEAR MISSING: Many things. An accumulation of guilt feelings that became intolerable. Or the fear of disclosure. Possibly she felt her marriage was being threatened.

Anyway, she obviously weighed what she was getting from the affair against what she stood to lose-and she decided to end it. Be wise and kind, and accept the fact that it's over.

DEAR ABBY: What makes a person always want to be first with bad news?

I have a relative who can't wait to call up everybody she knows to tell them that a mutual friend has cancer.

When I answer the phone and she's on the other end, I automatically brace myself for some bad news. She also gives me all the gory details of suicides, accidents and illnesses of people I don't even know. I try to cut her short, but there's no stopping her.

She is big-hearted and a good person basically, but this one fault sets my teeth on edge. Any suggestions?

N. CAROLINA

DEAR CAROLINA: Perhaps if you understood why she enjoys being the bearer of bad news, it would help you to be more compassionate. It gives her a feeling of "importance."

DEAR ABBY: I am a gravedigger for a funeral home. I've been at this job for three years, and the longer I work at gravedigging, the more I wish I were doing something else. It seems as though I think of death all the time.

What do you suggest I do? Please don't tell me to get another job because all the other jobs require a high school diploma, and I dropped out of school in the ninth grade.

DEPRESSED IN TEXAS
DEAR DEPRESSED: Call your department of public education and ask how a drop-out can "drop in" again and get his high school diploma. It's easier than you think.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

He's Turned Off When Lover Cools Affair

DEAR ABBY: I need a woman's viewpoint, and you're the woman.

Last summer I became very much attracted to a middle-aged, married woman. We met socially. (I'm a middle-aged, married man.) She felt the same way as I did, and it soon developed into a most wonderful, loving, intimate relationship.

We'd meet twice a week at a motel—very discreetly and we'd talk on the phone everyday. We both admitted we had never known such love and happiness, but being sensible people, we didn't consider breaking up our respective families. (We both have children.)

Oddly enough, my wife and I and this woman and her husband were a most compatible foursome.

Everything was heavenly, then suddenly for no apparent reason she said it was over and she refused to meet me again! She gave no reason for her sudden change of heart. She said that she still "felt" the same but that we couldn't continue our affair.

I've called her and begged for some explanation. She cut the conversation short and said, "It's over."

Abby, I really care about this woman. Doesn't she owe me an explanation? What would make a woman terminate an affair in this abrupt manner?

all the other jobs require a high school diploma, and I dropped out of school in the ninth grade.

DEPRESSED IN TEXAS

DEAR DEPRESSED: Call your department of public education and ask how a drop-out can "drop in" again and get his high school diploma. It's easier than you think.

DEAR CAROLINA: Perhaps if you understood why she enjoys being the bearer of bad news, it would help you to be more compassionate. It gives her a feeling of "importance."

DEAR ABBY: I am a gravedigger for a funeral home. I've been at this job for three years, and the longer I work at gravedigging, the more I wish I were doing something else. It seems as though I think of death all the time.

What do you suggest I do? Please don't tell me to get another job because Dedication Ceremonies and a special Open House will be observed 1-5 p.m. Sunday at the South Central Ohio Regional Juvenile Detention Center, located northwest of Chillicothe.

The public is encouraged to see the new facility for juvenile offenders which will serve the Courts of Highland, Pickaway, Ross, Vinton, Jackson and Pike counties.

General Plans Cable Addition In Williamsport

Construction is under way on a major cable addition for growth and service improvement in the Williamsport exchange, by General Telephone Co. of Ohio.

William D. Anderson, Circleville customer service manager, said the $32,600 expansion will upgrade service and allow for future growth in the area.

The new cable will beef up facilities in the north and west rural areas of the exchange and the urban area of Williamsport. Where possible the cable will be buried.

Portions of the new cable will replace existing facilities for maintenance reasons. Completion of the project is scheduled for June, 1976.

The Williamsport exchange serves 713 telephones in a 53.8-square-mile area of Pickaway and Ross Counties.

Natural Gas Extraction Feasible Soon

KENT, Ohio (AP)—Expected shortages of natural gas in Ohio can be offset by extracting the gas from available shale in the state, a federal energy research scientist says.

Joseph Pasini, research supervisor for petroleum and natural gas at the Morgantown, W. Va., energy research center, told an energy conference at Kent State University Wednesday that the process may be economically feasible within two years.

He said he is optimistic natural gas can be extracted from Devonian shale rock from 9,000 existing wells in Ohio. The process involves fracturing, or pumping foam into a well to force remaining deposits to the surface.

"The federal government has invested about $9 million in this research and Ohio has contributed about $2 million, a cooperative venture unheard of before," Pasini said.

He added that this process can offset the 10 per cent cut in natural gas predicted for Ohio this winter.

Another speaker at the conference, Ned E. Williams, from the Ohio Environmental Protection Administration, said that the EPA must find ways to help industries financially so that they may keep the air and water in the state clean.

Instead of asking for impossible standards, EPA must try to keep the the environment clean and yet not compound the energy problems, Williams said.

Energy Cuts Paying Off For OSU

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Energy reduction measures at Ohio State University are beginning to pay, the university said Wednesday.

The university began the program in 1973, with the departments of physical facilities and mechanical engineering doing a building-by-building survey to see how energy could be conserved.

Edward Q. Moulton, vice president for business and administration, said in four of six buildings where modifications are in progress the savings are ahead of estimates.

At the biological sciences building, modifications cost $37,156, and the results indicate that it will take only four months, rather than the predicted 14 months, to return the amount in reduced use of gas and electricity, Moulton said.

In the medical professions buildings, the payback period estimate has been revised from 12 to seven months for a return of $30,000, he said.

McCampbell Hall, where modifications cost $57,200, is expected to pay for itself in 16 months instead 18 months as planned. Similar results were listed for the other buildings.

Moulton said the university plans to expand the conservation program to include all the major buildings on the Columbus campus as well as those at regional campuses.

Engineer Examination Winners To Be Feted

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — More than 1,200 persons who recently passed engineer and surveyor examinations will be honored Saturday at Hitchcock Hall on the Ohio State University campus.

The Ohio Society of Professional Engineers will present certificates of merit to those who received the highest grades in their respective fields.

Tours will be conducted by J. Max Knisley, Superintendent and his staff.

The activities will be highlighted by a dedicatory address by the Hon. C. William O'Neill, Chief Justice of the Ohio Supreme Court. Other parts of the program include ribbon cutting at 1 p.m.; presentation of flags by Hon. Robert McKewan, State Representative of Highland Co.; welcomes by Grant McDonald, Chairman, Ross County Commissioners; Hon. Myrl Shoemaker, State Representative of Ross County; and Hon. Oakley Collins, State Senator of Ross County.

Various other public officials, contractors and the architect will be introduced as well as the new staff of the Center.

The Center is scheduled to go into operation Nov. 3 and will accommodate 14 boys and five girls, 14-18 years of age for brief six to ten day periods.

Child Hurt In Accident

Three and a half year old Anna J. Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson Jr., 724 E. Ohio St., is in "good" condition in Children's Hospital, Columbus, where she is recovering from injuries suffered in an accident Wednesday.

Circleville Police said the youngster apparently ran into the side of a car on E. Ohio St., just west of the John St. intersection, 3:35 p.m. Wednesday.

Driver of the car, Nancy P. Moss, 25, 357 Eva Dr., told officers that the child ran into the path of her car. Mrs. Moss apparently tried to swerve to avoid the accident, but Anna kept running and hit the front side of the vehicle.

She was treated initially at Berger Hospital and later transferred to Children's for treatment.

Italian Poet Wins Nobel

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Eugenio Montale, 79-year-old Italian poet, was awarded the 1975 Nobel prize in literature today.

Montale has not published a major collection of poetry in more than 20 years.

He received a $143,000 prize besides the traditional gold medal and diploma. The prize will be awarded by the king of Sweden on Dec. 10.

Three Americans had been considered possibilities for the prize. They were Saul Bellow, Russian-born Vladimir Nabokov, and Norman Mailer.

Bomb Rips Car Outside Caroline Kennedy Residence

LONDON (AP) — Caroline Kennedy escaped injury today in a bomb explosion that killed one of Britain's leading cancer specialists.

The bomb blew up a car outside the house where Miss Kennedy, daughter of the late President John F. Kennedy, was staying. Her host, Conservative politician Hugh Fraser who owned the car, said neither she nor he was injured. Police said the 8:53 a.m. blast killed Prof. Gordon Hamilton Fairley as he was taking his poodle for a morning walk.

Seven other persons, including a Filipino woman who worked as a cook and housemaid for Fraser, suffered minor injuries.

Fraser and the 17-year-old Miss Kennedy had been planning to leave the house at about the time of the blast but a telephone call from a fellow member of Parliament kept them inside, Fraser said.

"Normally I would have been in the car when this happened but I was on the telephone," said Fraser, who in his public speeches has taken a tough stance against terrorism. The bomb had been placed under his car.

"There is no doubt it was meant for me — somebody obviously wants to blow me up," Fraser told newsmen and added: "I'm not surprised. I can think of a lot of people who would want to blow me up."

Urge Curbs On Corporate Contributions

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Legislators have been asked to consider a bill to outlaw corporate contributions for or against state issues.

Sen. Charles L. Butts, D-23 Cleveland, introduced the bill at a one-day session this week. It could not be acted upon in time to affect this year's election.

The bill would impose strict limits on contributions and expenditures by campaign committees, corporations and public utilities.

The legislation would impose a campaign spending ceiling of 1.5 cents times the population of the state for both supporters and opponents.

Under the 1970 census, that would amount to $160,000 on a statewide issue. By comparison, the committee supporting Gov. James A. Rhodes' four issues had spent $1.12 million through Oct. 15.

The proposed law would bar individual expenditures of more than $25 unless the expenditure was approved by the campaign committee and reported as a contribution and expenditure by the committee. The law also would stipulate that only one committee for and one committee against a state issue could operate.

Contributions by corporations and public utilities would be barred. Businesses or their officers who violate the law would be subject to criminal prosecution.

The bulk of contributions to the governor's committee has been made by corporations and utilities. Contracting firms alone had contributed $400,000 through the Ohio Contractors Association.

Workhouse Hit By Disturbance

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Several mattresses were burned and windows broken during a disturbance at the Columbus Women's Workhouse late Tuesday.

Police said it began when they took a woman prisoner into the workhouse on a disorderly conduct charge. They said arresting officers had her arms behind her back but she began yelling she was being choked.

Several inmates began throwing objects at the officers while others stacked blankets, mattresses and bedding and set them ablaze.

The 34 inmates were temporarily evacuated while firemen extinguished the blaze. There were no serious injuries, workhouse officials said.

National Red Cross Rep Speaks To Pickaway Chapter

Miss Jane Wriston, National Representative of the American Red Cross, was a visitor at the Wednesday meeting of the Pickaway County chapter Board of Directors. She explained the need for encouraging those in flood prone areas to secure insurance against loss in case of disaster. Those without insurance will not be eligible for government assistance under the most recent disaster laws.

In the Service to Military Families it was reported that 27 servicemen or their families received assistance during the past month. The chapter was involved in assistance to one family whose home was destroyed by fire.

Idea Kits Available

"Let your child learn by doing" is the theme of a kit of material designed to help parents enrich the home lives of 3-to-5-year-old children. Titled "Activities for preschool-Age Children," the kit was recently published by the Cooperative Extension Service of The Ohio State University.

In addition to a Parent's Manual, the kit includes six sets of five cards each that contain ideas for encouraging children to explore the world around them with their senses. Each activity card is organized so the parent knows what the activity is, what material will be needed and how to carry through the activity with the child.

Written by Jean D. Dickerscheid, professor of Home Economics at OSU, the activities explain how to use inexpensive materials commonly found in and around the home. Therefore, in addition to parents, nursery school teachers, babysitters, religious educators and others who care for and guide young children will find the ideas on these cards helpful in their work.

Kits are available through county Extension Service offices for $1 each. Mail orders will be filled at $1.70 per kit from the Extension Information Office, OSU, 2120 Fyffe Rd., Columbus, Ohio 43210.

The new Blood Program regulations were discussed at length and it was agreed that the best recruitment tool is that of personal contact.

Pickaway County's goal for 1975 will remain 1500 units, 10 visits with 150 pints to be collected at each visit. The next visit of the Bloodmobile will be November 6.

Candy cups to be used on Thanksgiving at Chillicothe VA Hospital are being decorated by local Girl Scout Troops. Six new volunteers have taken VA Hospital orientation and are now scheduled regularly at the hospital. Mrs. Lewis Dean requested that gifts to be distributed at the Gift Store on December 3 and 4 be brought to the Chapter as soon as possible.

Singing groups to carol at the VA hospital may be scheduled any time during the 3 weeks preceding Christmas.

The car committee announced that the new chapter cars have arrived and the 1975 models are now for sale.

Dick Wylie, chairman of the housing committee, stated that the search for quarters for the chapter is continuing, with no success to date.

Dedication Set Sunday At Juvenile Center

Dedication Ceremonies and a special Open House will be observed 1-5 p.m. Sunday at the South Central Ohio Regional Juvenile Detention Center, located northwest of Chillicothe.

The public is encouraged to see the new facility for juvenile offenders which will serve the Courts of Highland, Pickaway, Ross, Vinton, Jackson and Pike counties.

General Plans Cable Addition In Williamsport

Construction is under way on a major cable addition for growth and service improvement in the Williamsport exchange, by General Telephone Co. of Ohio.

William D. Anderson, Circleville customer service manager, said the $32,600 expansion will upgrade service and allow for future growth in the area.

The new cable will beef up facilities in the north and west rural areas of the exchange and the urban area of Williamsport. Where possible the cable will be buried.

Portions of the new cable will replace existing facilities for maintenance reasons. Completion of the project is scheduled for June, 1976.

The Williamsport exchange serves 713 telephones in a 53.8-square-mile area of Pickaway and Ross Counties.

Natural Gas Extraction Feasible Soon

KENT, Ohio (AP)—Expected shortages of natural gas in Ohio can be offset by extracting the gas from available shale in the state, a federal energy research scientist says.

Joseph Pasini, research supervisor for petroleum and natural gas at the Morgantown, W. Va., energy research center, told an energy conference at Kent State University Wednesday that the process may be economically feasible within two years.

He said he is optimistic natural gas can be extracted from Devonian shale rock from 9,000 existing wells in Ohio. The process involves fracturing, or pumping foam into a well to force remaining deposits to the surface.

"The federal government has invested about $9 million in this research and Ohio has contributed about $2 million, a cooperative venture unheard of before," Pasini said.

He added that this process can offset the 10 per cent cut in natural gas predicted for Ohio this winter.

Another speaker at the conference, Ned E. Williams, from the Ohio Environmental Protection Administration, said that the EPA must find ways to help industries financially so that they may keep the air and water in the state clean.

Instead of asking for impossible standards, EPA must try to keep the environment clean and yet not compound the energy problems, Williams said.

Energy Cuts Paying Off For OSU

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Energy reduction measures at Ohio State University are beginning to pay, the university said Wednesday.

The university began the program in 1973, with the departments of physical facilities and mechanical engineering doing a building-by-building survey to see how energy could be conserved.

Edward Q. Moulton, vice president for business and administration, said in four of six buildings where modifications are in progress the savings are ahead of estimates.

At the biological sciences building, modifications cost $37,156, and the results indicate that it will take only four months, rather than the predicted 14 months, to return the amount in reduced use of gas and electricity, Moulton said.

In the medical professions buildings, the payback period estimate has been revised from 12 to seven months for a return of $30,000, he said.

McCampbell Hall, where modifications cost $57,200, is expected to pay for itself in 16 months instead 18 months as planned. Similar results were listed for the other buildings.

Moulton said the university plans to expand the conservation program to include all the major buildings on the Columbus campus as well as those at regional campuses.

Engineer Examination Winners To Be Feted

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — More than 1,200 persons who recently passed engineer and surveyor examinations will be honored Saturday at Hitchcock Hall on the Ohio State University campus.

The Ohio Society of Professional Engineers will present certificates of merit to those who received the highest grades in their respective fields.

Tours will be conducted by J. Max Knisley, Superintendent and his staff.

The activities will be highlighted by a dedicatory address by the Hon. C. William O'Neill, Chief Justice of the Ohio Supreme Court. Other parts of the program include ribbon cutting at 1 p.m.; presentation of flags by Hon. Robert McKewan, State Representative of Highland Co.; welcomes by Grant McDonald, Chairman, Ross County Commissioners; Hon. Myrl Shoemaker, State Representative of Ross County; and Hon. Oakley Collins, State Senator of Ross County.

Various other public officials, contractors and the architect will be introduced as well as the new staff of the Center.

The Center is scheduled to go into operation Nov. 3 and will accommodate 14 boys and five girls, 14-18 years of age for brief six to ten day periods.

Grange News

WASHINGTON GRANGE recently met with the Worthy Master Lydia DeLong presiding.

Randy Wolfe and Paul Dunkle of Saltcreek Grange were present. Brenda Bolender reported on activities of the youth.

New staff bases were presented to the Grange, made by Ralph DeLong.

It was announced that at the next meeting, Nov. 11, the County Youth Installation team would install the officers for Scioto, Saltcreek, Star, and Washington Granges. Each family attending is asked to bring a dessert for a smorgasbord.

The program was in charge of the Worthy Lecturer Diana Lands. She presented Lydia DeLong, who showed slides and told of a recent trip to England with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lands.

Refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lands II and their committee.

Cincinnati Reds World Champions

BOSTON (AP) — For several years, the Cincinnati Reds have been thinking like world champions...and almost playing that way. Now they've finally got the hardware to prove their supremacy.

After a fistful of agonizing frustrations, the Reds took care of that matter Wednesday night by beating the Boston Red Sox 4-3 in the finale of the exquisite 1975 World Series.

"We went to the Series in 1972 and thought we were the best team and were beaten by the Oakland A's and then we lost in the playoffs to the New York Mets in 1973 and thought we were the best then," said Joe Morgan, who got the game-winning hit with two outs in the ninth inning Wednesday night.

"Until we prove it on the field, we're nothing," Morgan added. "Now I can go home and say, 'We're the best.'"

The dramatic victory, won in Hollywood style on Morgan's single, not only gave the peppery second baseman a flag to wave but did wonders for Manager Sparky Anderson's psyche.

Before winning the tense seventh game in the hostile atmosphere of Boston's colorful old Fenway Park, Anderson had been discredited for not winning big games. His failures went back to the 1970 World Series, when the Big Red Machine was steamrolled by the Baltimore Orioles in five games.

Then, after running away with the National League pennant in 1972, the Reds and their supposed superiority were deflated by the A's in seven games. In 1973, the Reds won the NL's West Division but were taken in the playoffs by the upstart Mets.

"We always believed we were the best team," said Morgan, "even if we didn't win the championships."

Anderson had an explanation of sorts for the Reds' past failures. "The true test of a great club is what they do over a 162-game season," he said, "not what happens in a short fivegame or seven-game series. In a short series, only luck prevails."

For a change, Lady Luck had a kiss rather than a slap in the face for the Reds.

The notorious Cincinnati machine had roared non-stop to the West Division flag, winning an amazing 108 games. The Reds were especially wicked at home, winning a record 64 games. When they won the NL playoffs by beating the East Division's champion Pittsburgh Pirates in three easy games, it was only natural for observers to think "National League superiority" in the World Series.

The Boston Red Sox, in the championship round for the first time since 1967, were truly a Cinderella team. In preseason prognostications, the Red Sox were not even picked by most to win the East Division, let alone the American League pennant.

But at the end, the Red Sox were there, thanks to the best crop of rookies in recent major league seasons. Fred Lynn and Jim Rice led the Boston charge through the East. And the Red Sox raised even more eyebrows when they took three straight games from the three-time defending world champion A's in the AL playoffs.

With their awesome record behind them, the Reds had every right to play the favorite's role in this World Series—and accordingly were granted that honor by the odds-makers.

However, Anderson must have been chilled by ghosts of Series' past after Luis Tiant, the Cuban superman, beat his team 6-0 in the opener. Tiant had life in his arm that day and the Reds had no life in their bats, manufacturing only five hits while the Fenway Park faithful cheered, "Loo-ie, Loo-ie!"

The Red Sox were on the verge of another victory in Game 2. Boston's Bill Lee pitched magnificently for eight innings, allowing merely four hits and one run in that time. But after giving up a leadoff double to Johnny Bench in the ninth, he was gone—and so were the Red Sox' chances.

Dick Drago came in and gave up a ground ball that allowed Bench to move to third. Then, after getting the second out, Drago gave up a soft infield single to Dave Concepcion that tied the game at 2-2. And then Ken Griffey won it for Cincinnati, 3-2, with a whistling double. The game was played in wretched, rainy weather.

The World Series scene shifted to Cincinnati and Johnny Bench, the reds' All-Star catcher, felt confident. "Maybe we won't sweep the Series here," he said, "but we should win two out of three from the Red Sox."

The Reds did—but it wasn't easy.

In game 3, the teams hit a total of six home runs, but it was a controversial bunt that traveled less than 10 feet which helped the Reds take a wild 6-5 decision in 10 innings. With the game tied at 5-5, Cesar Geronimo led off the 10th with a single and Ed Armbrister laid down a sacrifice bunt that caused all the commotion.

Armbrister barely budged from his position in front of the plate. Boston catcher Carlton Fisk collided with him and had trouble picking up the ball. When he did, he threw wildly past second base in an attempt to nail the lead runner. Both runners moved up a base and Pete Rose was walked before Morgan came through with a game-winning single.

Fisk complained bitterly that Armbrister had interfered with the play and should have been declared out.

The notorious "collision bunt" became the cause celebre of this Series and Larry Barnett, the home plate umpire who was involved in the play, eventually had his life threatened and needed protection from the FBI.

Tiant came back to salvage the fourth game for the Red Sox. His Cleveland Cavaliers breaking ball not functioning, Tiant pitched courageously and struggled through nine innings with a heart-stopping 5-4 triumph. Dwight Evans tripled home two runs in a five-run fourth for the American League champions, disappointing a record Riverfront Stadium crowd of 55,667.

The fifth game belonged to Cincinnati and it was the Reds' first clear-cut victory up to that point. Don Gullett was nearly untouchable for eight innings before needing relief help from Rawly Eastwick in the ninth. Tony Perez woke up from a disastrous slump and hit two home runs as the Reds won 6-2.

With the Big Red Machine in the driver's seat, leading in games 3-2, the teams came back to Boston for the last weekend. But it turned into a lost weekend as rain washed out not only Saturday's and Sunday's games but Monday night's rescheduled one as well. The three days of rain tied a Series record for most games rained out successfully.

When they finally got back to action for Game 6, it was well worth the wait. The teams played a magnificent game that will probably be remembered for years to come. Carlton Fisk's home run leading off the 12th inning saved the Red Sox from elimination, giving Boston a thrilling 7-6 triumph.

The Red Sox, just four outs from losing it, tied the game 6-6 on Bernie Carbo's three-run homer in the eighth. They loaded the bases in the ninth with nobody out but were cut off by a brilliant double play and some questionable baserunning. Evans robbed Morgan of a tie-breaking double—or more—in the 11th with a great catch that he turned into a double play. Then Fisk ended it all with one dramatic shot against the foul pole in left.

That set the stage for the finale. But before the curtain came down on the Red Sox, they took the spotlight.

Boston scored three runs off Gullett with the help of the lefthander's wildness in the third inning.

"I was real concerned, down three runs," Anderson said. "I wanted to stay with Gullett because he's my best, but he was too eager and was over-throwing the ball. When he gets away from all those friendly Kentucky folks and fans at Riverfront, sometimes Don gets too keyed up and tends to over-throw which makes his ball straighten out—like tonight."

Lee kept the Reds from scoring through the first five innings. But in the sixth an error by second baseman Denny Doyle opened the door for baseball's "comeback kids." Perez hit a monster home run over the left-center field screen and the Reds were suddenly back in business, behind only 3-2.

"Tony started it," Morgan said. "He gave us life when we needed it." Cincinnati tied it on Pete Rose's run-scoring single in the seventh. The Boston crowd of 35,205 became less overbearing at this point, and even quieter when the Reds bolted ahead in the ninth.

Ken Griffey walked to start the winning rally. He was sacrificed to second by Cesar Geronimo, a defensive giant for the reds all through the Series. Dan Driessen batted for winner Clay Carroll and grounded out, sending Griffey to third. Rose then walked before Morgan hit loser Jim Burton's 1-2 pitch to center for the game-winning single.

"It was something low and outside," said Morgan. "To be honest, I probably would have struck out on a pitch like that two years ago. But now I'm a better hitter. He made a great pitch. I just stayed with it and flipped it into center field. Everybody's gonna say it was a blooper but I'll take it."

"I waited 11 years for that hit."

Reds Had Confidence To End

BOSTON (AP)—Call it confidence or cockiness. The Cincinnati Reds had it to the end.

"We've always believed in ourselves until there's no tomorrow," said pint-sized Joe Morgan, who shook off a World Series slump to propel the Reds to baseball's pinnacle Wednesday night.

"We felt in our hearts that we were going to put the best nine guys in baseball on that field. It's like a poker game. We felt we were due," said Morgan, whose two-out liner off Boston reliever Jim Burton produced the Reds 4-3 victory and their third world championship in the club's 107-year history.

"The guy made a great pitch. It was something low and outside. To be honest, I probably would have struck out on a pitch like that two years ago. I just stayed with it and flipped it into center field," said the 5-foot-7 dynamo, who redeemed himself for past frustrations, including a 3-for-24 disaster in the 1972 World Series against Oakland.

The Reds, hailed as one of baseball's most awesome teams in years but on the verge of suffering their fourth World Series failure in 14 years, rode Morgan's two-out single to victory.

Reliever Will McEnaney, the youngest man on the Cincinnati club at 23, retired the ever-attacking Red Sox 1-2-3 to seal Cincinnati's first world championship game since it beat Detroit in seven games in 1940.

"My stomach was churning so much I could hear it growling," said the 23-year-old lefthander, who was more nervous two weeks ago when he became a father for the first time.

"It was my moment of truth," said McEnaney. "I said, 'Here it is. Let's go get it.'"

He coaxed Juan Beniquez into flying out to right field, got pinch-hitter Bob Montgomery to ground out to shortstop and lured ever-dangerous Carl Yastrzemski into hitting a long fly to Cesar Geronimo in center field.

With that, the Red Sox had finally run out of miracles—but not out of superlatives from their victors.

"They are the finest team we've played this year," said Reds Manager Sparky Anderson. "Just outstanding."

Anderson, who guided the Reds to 108 victories during the season—most by a National League team since 1907—called the drama-packed 13-day event "the greatest class Series ever held. These were two teams with class."

Anderson, engulfed by a flood of writers, retreated to his office to take a phone call. "It was Tom Yawkey (owner of the Red Sox). He called to congratulate us. I thanked him for everything he did for us while we were here. He's a tremendous person."

Lost in the shuffle of the late-inning heroics by Morgan and Pete Rose was quiet Tony Perez. Morgan credited Perez as the motivating force in the Reds' comeback.

"Tony started it. He gave us life when we needed it," said Morgan, who entered the seventh game with only five hits in 23 at-bats for a meek .217 average.

Perez drilled a two-run homer, his third homer of the Series, to ignite the Cincinnati bench.

"Everybody was saying 'Let's go! We're gonna get 'em!'" said Morgan. Rose, the gutsy captain of the National League champions, drove in the tying run in the seventh with a two-out single.

Then, in the ninth, Ken Griffey opened with a walk, moved to second on Geronimo's sacrifice bunt and raced to third when pinch-hitter Dan Driessen grounded out.

That brought Rose to the plate and Morgan remembers hoping his teammate would draw a walk.

"I wanted to be the guy," said Morgan, his hair glistening with champagne bubbles.

"Everybody's gonna say it was a blooper, but I'll take it," said the Reds' intense All-Star second baseman.

Catcher Johnny Bench, the "quarterback" of the Big Red Machine, bathed in champagne shower and the glow of victory.

"I've been dreaming of this. I kept thinking the third time would be the charm," said Bench. "But after last night's game I wasn't sure who had the charm."

"I don't know if anything will ever matter as much as this moment right now," said Bench, his voice cracking.

Boston Red Sox Unbowed By Defeat

BOSTON (AP) — There were no tears, no temperamental outbursts. The Boston Red Sox bowed out of the 1975 World Series quietly but with heads high, moving through the crowded clubhouse exchanging handshakes for a job well done.

"We're a proud ball club and hate to lose, but there's nothing to be ashamed of," outfielder Dwight Evans said in summing up the general feeling Wednesday night after the Red Sox 4-3 defeat by the Cincinnati Reds in the seventh game of the Series.

"We gave it all we had and we got beaten—but not by much," Evans said. "I think everyone agreed that it was a heck of a Series, and not many people thought we'd be in it last spring. But we're a young club and we're going to be here for years. I'm already looking forward to next year."

As writers, cameramen and just plain visitors swarmed through the clubhouse, one gentleman elbowed his way through to shake hands with Manager Darrell Johnson in his small office.

"You made all of us proud," Boston Mayor Kevin White told Johnson. "All of you did a grand job."

"It was a great Series and season for our fans and the city of Boston," Johnson replied. "I don't like losing any game and we're disappointed. But we lost to a fine team and we certainly didn't disgrace ourselves."

"We weren't intimidated by the Reds," said Carlton Fisk, who tied up the Series with a 12th-inning home run in the sixth game Tuesday night. "They have a great club, but I thought our pitchers handled their big hitters well. We may have surprised them a bit, but they're solid."

With five of the seven games decided by one run, everyone talked about how evenly matched the Red Sox and the Reds turned out to be in the drama-packed series.

"We lost because of the little breaks," Johnson said. "The two teams are so evenly matched that it was like a toss of the coin as far as I'm concerned. But for a little flip here and a little flop there, things might have been different."

Fisk said he "probably will replay the Series a lot up to Thanksgiving. Then I'll forget about it and set my sights on spring training—so we'll be here again next fall."

CINCINNATI (AP)—Major League Hockey makes its debut in Cincinnati tonight when the Cincinnati Stingers of the World Hockey Association makes their home debut at the new Cincinnati Coliseum.

A crowd in excess of 10,000 is expected at the opening game against Edmonton, who defeated the Stingers in Canada Sunday.

Cincinnati Reds World Champions

BOSTON (AP) — For several years, the Cincinnati Reds have been thinking like world champions...and almost playing that way. Now they've finally got the hardware to prove their supremacy.

After a fistful of agonizing frustrations, the Reds took care of that matter Wednesday night by beating the Boston Red Sox 4-3 in the finale of the exquisite 1975 World Series.

"We went to the Series in 1972 and thought we were the best team and were beaten by the Oakland A's and then we lost in the playoffs to the New York Mets in 1973 and thought we were the best then," said Joe Morgan, who got the gamewinning hit with two outs in the ninth inning Wednesday night.

"Until we prove it on the field, we're nothing," Morgan added. "Now I can go home and say, 'We're the best.'"

The dramatic victory, won in Hollywood style on Morgan's single, not only gave the peppery second baseman a flag to wave but did wonders for Manager Sparky Anderson's psyche.

Before winning the tense seventh game in the hostile atmosphere of Boston's colorful old Fenway Park, Anderson had been discredited for not winning big games. His failures went back to the 1970 World Series, when the Big Red Machine was steamrolled by the Baltimore Orioles in five games.

Then, after running away with the National League pennant in 1972, the Reds and their supposed superiority were deflated by the A's in seven games. In 1973, the Reds won the NL's West Division but were taken in the playoffs by the upstart Mets.

"We always believed we were the best team," said Morgan, "even if we didn't win the championships."

Anderson had an explanation of sorts for the Reds' past failures. "The true test of a great club is what they do over a 162-game season," he said, "not what happens in a short fivegame or seven-game series. In a short series, only luck prevails."

For a change, Lady Luck had a kiss rather than a slap in the face for the Reds.

The notorious Cincinnati machine had roared non-stop to the West Division flag, winning an amazing 108 games. The Reds were especially wicked at home, winning a record 64 games. When they won the NL playoffs by beating the East Division's champion Pittsburgh Pirates in three easy games, it was only natural for observers to think "National League superiority" in the World Series.

The Boston Red Sox, in the championship round for the first time since 1967, were truly a Cinderella team. In preseason prognostications, the Red Sox were not even picked by most to win the East Division, let alone the American League pennant.

But at the end, the Red Sox were there, thanks to the best crop of rookies in recent major league seasons. Fred Lynn and Jim Rice led the Boston charge through the East. And the Red Sox raised even more eyebrows when they took three straight games from the three-time defending world champion A's in the AL playoffs.

With their awesome record behind them, the Reds had every right to play the favorite's role in this World Series—and accordingly were granted that honor by the odds-makers.

However, Anderson must have been chilled by ghosts of Series' past after Luis Tiant, the Cuban superman, beat his team 6-0 in the opener. Tiant had life in his arm that day and the Reds had no life in their bats, manufacturing only five hits while the Fenway Park faithful cheered, "Loo-ie, Loo-ie!"

The Red Sox were on the verge of another victory in Game 2. Boston's Bill Lee pitched magnificently for eight innings, allowing merely four hits and one run in that time. But after giving up a leadoff double to Johnny Bench in the ninth, he was gone—and so were the Red Sox' chances.

Dick Drago came in and gave up a ground ball that allowed Bench to move to third. Then, after getting the second out, Drago gave up a soft infield single to Dave Concepcion that tied the game at 2-2. And then Ken Griffey won it for Cincinnati, 3-2, with a whistling double. The game was played in wretched, rainy weather.

The World Series scene shifted to Cincinnati and Johnny Bench, the reds' All-Star catcher, felt confident. "Maybe we won't sweep the Series here," he said, "but we should win two out of three from the Red Sox."

World Football League Folds

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Football League became terminally ill in the fall of 1974 as some teams falsified attendance figures, some lied to the public, and most defaulted on player payrolls. A year later the patient died, unable to overcome the image it fought.

The television moguls weren't interested. The Joe Namaths couldn't be bought. Respectability and credibility — the WFL's biggest enemies — were distant. And, most important, the people of the WFL's cities demonstrated almost unanimous apathy.

Ohio State, Michigan Lead In Statistics

CHICAGO (AP) — Ohio State and Michigan, the Big Ten's only undefeated teams, also lead the conference in most statistical departments.

Ohio State's top-ranked Buckeyes lead the league in scoring with an average of 42 points a game and also in scoring defense. Ohio State has not given up a point in three conference games. Michigan is second in scoring at a 36-point clip and second in scoring defense, having yielded but 12 points in three games—all on field goals.

Michigan is tops in rushing and rushing defense followed by Ohio State in both categories. The Wolverines have averaged 408.3 yards a game rushing to 326.3 for OSU. Michigan has yielded 102 yards a game rushing followed by Ohio State with 121.3.

Michigan is first in total offense with 443 yards a game and Ohio State has

Statistics Tell Story For Browns

CLEVELAND (AP) — If there were any questions about the reason the Cleveland Browns are winless in five games this season, they have been answered by cold, hard National Football League statistics.

In the 13-team American Football Conference, the Browns rank 12th in total offense and dead last in total defense.

Cleveland is ranked 10th in passing and 10th in rushing, 13th against the pass and sixth—a tribute to defensive tackles Jerry Sherk and Walter Johnson—against the run.

The San Diego Chargers join the Browns at the bottom of the AFC statistical heap. San Diego, also winless, ranks last in both offensive categories and leads only the Browns in total defense.

The Browns have some individual performers among the league leaders. Despite the fact that quarterback Mike Phipps, who started all five games for Cleveland, ranks 14th in passing and reserve Brian Sipe 12th, the Browns have three receivers in the top 15.

Rookie tight end Oscar Roan stands fifth on the list with 18 receptions for 227 yards and a 12.6 average.

Wide receiver Reggie Rucker, picked up by Cleveland from New England in a trade last spring, is eighth with 17 catches and a 14.2 average.

With its revenues weak, with $10 million already lost, with predictions that it might take $40 million and two years more to make any progress, there was really nothing else for the WFL to do.

And so a professional league was folded Wednesday, beginning what many believe will be a trend away from the rampant sports' expansion boom of the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Chris Hemminger, the Hawaiian millionaire who singlehandedly rescued the WFL from the ashes of its first disastrous season, reorganizing gained 404.7 yards. Michigan is first in total defense with a yield of 176.7 yards followed by Ohio State with 190 yards a game.

Minnesota is the leading team in passing with an average of 185.7 yards a game and Wisconsin is tops in pass defense yielding an average of 22.3 yards a game.

Michigan's Gordon Bell is the league's individual rushing leader with an average of 138.3 yards a game. Courtney Snyder of Indiana is second at 115 yards a game. Purdue's Mike Pruitt has a 113.3 average and Archie Griffin of Ohio State has a 111.7 average.

Tony Dungy of Minnesota leads in total offense with an average of 183 yards a game and also is the passing leader. Dungy has completed 37 of 70 passes for 537 yards and four touchdowns. Cornelius Green of Ohio State is second followed by Charlie Baggett of Michigan State.

Ron Kullas and Mike Jones, both of Minnesota, are the leading receivers. Kullas has caught 13 passes and Jones 12.

Pete Johnson of Ohio State is the leading scorer with 42 points on seven touchdowns followed by Greg Boykin of Northwestern with 30 points on five touchdowns.

Bob Wood of Michigan is the leader in kick scoring. He has 26 points on six field goals and eight conversions. Dan Beaver of Illinois has 21 points on three field goals and 12 conversions.

Tim Fox of Ohio State leads in punt returns with a 23.3 average and Ira Matthews of Wisconsin is the leader in kickoff returns with a 28.2 average.

Tom Skladany of Ohio State is the top punter with a 45.6 average but Dick Milaeger of Wisconsin at 43.7 and Randy Dean of Northwestern are close. Milaeger has a 43.7 average and Dean 43.0. Craigh Cassidy of Ohio State is the leader in interceptions with five.

with new owners and a new financing concept, made the announcement.

"Our decision not to proceed is due primarily to our collective inability to penetrate markets in WFL franchise cities," he said. Translated, that means the WFL's dismal average crowds of 13,370 — its only source of income — was sinking every club deep in red ink.

Looking around him at hockey, basketball and tennis leagues which also are losing millions, Hemminger said, "We will not be the last. The bubble of the professional sports' boom is in for a bust."

Predictably, a number of clubs said they wanted to continue. Two teams in the 10-team WFL said the vote in a Wednesday afternoon conference call was 6-4 to fold, but six teams claimed they wanted to continue.

The decision to end the WFL in the 12th week of its second year meant that $30 million — $20 million of it in 1974 — had been lost by professional sport's most unsuccessful league. And $15 million is still owed to players, businesses and season ticket holders from 1974. Those people will never see their money. Hemminger's people, however, have remained current in their payments.

The decision also sent National Football League clubs into late night meetings. Under a bylaw passed a month ago to accommodate the return of John Gilliam from the WFL, NFL clubs have until 4 p.m. next Tuesday to sign any player who becomes a free agent because his team or his league had folded.

Thus, the NFL suddenly has about 380 free agents from the WFL on its hands. The big question was whether such high-salaried players as former Miami Dolphins Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield were free agents, or whether they are still bound to their contracts.

The Dolphins want the hard-driving Csonka back, but they don't appear to want Kiick. Warfield has previously said this would be his last team.

Other WFL players the NFL might want are running backs Calvin Hill, Anthony Davis and Tommy Reamon, tight end Ted Kwalick and quarterbacks Danny White, Matthew Reed and George Mira. The New Orleans NFL team, the only league club which admitted it wanted WFL players, said there were eight athletes it was studying.

In another development, the Memphis and Birmingham clubs met a week ago with representatives of the NFL to discuss entrance to that league as expansion franchises. The two former WFL teams are maneuvering to make those applications soon; the NFL said any application would be considered.

Pete Rose Named World Series MVP

BOSTON (AP) — "I wish Opening Day was tomorrow," said Pete Rose. The captain of the Cincinnati Reds cradled a bottle of champagne in his right hand. His dark hair was matted with sweat. He talked in excited bursts, just the way he plays baseball.

"Joe Morgan made the clutch hit. He ought to be the Most Valuable Player," Rose said. "This was one hell of a series. I am just proud I got an opportunity to play in it."

It was the scrappy, 34-year-old Rose—and not Morgan—who was officially named the MVP of the 1975 World Series, which the Reds clinched with a 4-3 seventh-game victory over the Boston Red Sox Wednesday night. His prize is a new sports car.

"Aww, I don't care too much about the car," Rose added. "Actually, I'd like to chop it up into 26 pieces and pass it around to the rest of the team."

"If you stay in Boston long enough," a Bostonian interjected, "Somebody probably would do it for you."

The humorous aside did not derail Pete's train of thought.

"When I was a kid, my family didn't have much money," he continued. "We never had a car. When I graduated from high school, my dad gave me a 1937 Plymouth that cost $100."

"Now I've got a Porsche at home. And a friend lets me drive his Rolls-Royce. The friend, Mix Coy from Kentucky, is one of the Coys from the song about the feuding Hatfields and the McCoy's."

Rose was named MVP because the 1975 World Series was a battle of brawlers and nobody brawled as hard as the bandy-legged little third baseman.

He collected 10 hits—more than any player on both teams—in 27 times at bat for a .370 average. He threw out runners while virtually lying on his belly. He initiated double plays, roamed all over the area he was supposed to protect and kept stoking the fire in the Big Red Machine.

It's the only way Pete Rose knows how to play baseball—tough, unrelenting, the devil take the hindmost.

When Wajima won the Marlboro Handicap at Belmont Park it marked his fifth straight victory within two months.

"Long John" Reilly, who caught for the Cincinnati Redlegs baseball team in the 1880's, later playing first base, was the first ballplayer to use a glove.

World Football League Folds

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Football League became terminally ill in the fall of 1974 as some teams falsified attendance figures, some lied to the public, and most defaulted on player payrolls. A year later the patient died, unable to overcome the image it fought.

The television moguls weren't interested. The Joe Namaths couldn't be bought. Respectability and credibility — the WFL's biggest enemies — were distant. And, most important, the people of the WFL's cities demonstrated almost unanimous apathy.

Ohio State, Michigan Lead In Statistics

CHICAGO (AP) — Ohio State and Michigan, the Big Ten's only undefeated teams, also lead the conference in most statistical departments.

Ohio State's top-ranked Buckeyes lead the league in scoring with an average of 42 points a game and also in scoring defense. Ohio State has not given up a point in three conference games. Michigan is second in scoring at a 36-point clip and second in scoring defense, having yielded but 12 points in three games—all on field goals.

Michigan is tops in rushing and rushing defense followed by Ohio State in both categories. The Wolverines have averaged 408.3 yards a game rushing to 326.3 for OSU. Michigan has yielded 102 yards a game rushing followed by Ohio State with 121.3.

Michigan is first in total offense with 443 yards a game and Ohio State has

Statistics Tell Story For Browns

CLEVELAND (AP) — If there were any questions about the reason the Cleveland Browns are winless in five games this season, they have been answered by cold, hard National Football League statistics.

In the 13-team American Football Conference, the Browns rank 12th in total offense and dead last in total defense.

Cleveland is ranked 10th in passing and 10th in rushing, 13th against the pass and sixth—a tribute to defensive tackles Jerry Sherk and Walter Johnson—against the run.

The San Diego Chargers join the Browns at the bottom of the AFC statistical heap. San Diego, also winless, ranks last in both offensive categories and leads only the Browns in total defense.

Boy Born Without Immunity Does Well

CLEVELAND (AP)—Doctors say a 13-month-old boy who was born without immunities is adapting very well to home life after a year in the hospital— even if he isn't allowed to play with other kids.

Doctors at University Hospital say they may have succeeded for the first time in correcting such a congenital lack of the immunities through transfusions of red blood cells, but they don't want to take chances right now by letting the youngster come in contact with kids who might be carriers of fatal diseases.

Dr. Stephen H. Polmar said Tuesday it has been nearly five weeks since the child left its antiseptic hospital environment and the constant attention of nurses, and the boy is "doing very well at home—much better than we had any right to expect."

Dr. Polmar, an assistant professor of pediatrics at Case Western Reserve University, said the child's identity was being kept secret because the parents don't want publicity and the doctors don't want strangers swarming to see the baby.

"We aren't even telling what area

they live in," Polmar said. He did narrow it down to a location in Ohio 150 miles from the hospital.

The doctor conceded that there had been concern that the child's 372 days in "relative isolation" in the University's Rainbow Babies' and Children's Hospital might have caused problems.

"When you have a child whose only contact with other human beings is people he sees behind gloves, masks, caps and gowns—all he sees is eyes and never really gets close to other people—you have concern because that's not normal."

But he said no psychological abnormality has been detected at the child's "growth and development are entirely normal."

"He started talking at 12½ months and has the appropriate number of words for a child of 13 months."

Polmar noted that the child did get a lot of attention from the nurses, and his mother was with him living at the hospital about two weeks out of every month.

At home, the child, now weighing 20 pounds, is allowed the run of four rooms, and Polmar said he "goes out and plays in the park on nice days."

"We try to keep him away from other kids," the doctor said. "The biggest risk for kids like this is measles and chicken pox. These can be fatal infections. We don't want him near children who might be carriers."

Defense Officials Eye Irregularities

CINCINNATI (AP)—Deputy Defense Secretary William P. Clements Jr. said U.S. Department of Defense personnel who accepted gifts or favors from contractors violated department policy and will be disciplined.

However, Clements told a news conference, he doubts whether the practice is widespread.

"Northrop Corp., unfortunately has misbehaved in a number of areas," Clements said prior to an address to the Tri-State Chapter, American Defense Preparedness Association (ADPA).

"I am leading a group in the Pentagon to investigate charges against Northrop and other companies."

A Pentagon report charged Northrop spent $9.9 million on "questionable costs" and tried to recover $6.1 million from the government. Defense Secretary James Schlesinger later said the disclosure may be "just the tip of the iceberg."

"I am looking for that iceberg," Clements told a news conference, "but I don't think it is there. I will take disciplinary action if I find more wrongdoing. There is a taut directive against this. I hope DOD people are living within the letter and spirit of the directive."

Clements told the meeting "I consider this kind of misconduct inexcusable and unacceptable. If we find anyone who violated policy they will be disciplined."

Robert Murray, deputy assistant defense secretary for manpower and reserve affairs, Brig. Gen. James M. Thompson, deputy for estimates, and Robert N. Parker, deputy for research and engineering, also addressed the gathering of 100 members.

Clements told the chapter the U.S. has a 10-year lead in technology over the Russians.

"However, we have to run like hell" to stay ahead. "We can not stand still. That is our position with Congress."

Clements said the $9 billion in foreign military sales this year will help the U.S. balance of payments but "will not affect the readiness of our own forces."

Clements said the all-volunteer Army program has been a success and that morale and readiness now are higher than before.

Murray said the Selective Service System has been kept in readiness in case the country needs to draft troops again. "It might buy us 30 or 60 days" if a major war should break out, Murray said.

Thompson said the Congressional investigation of the Central Intelligence Agency has had little effect on military intelligence groups although "there is some reluctance of people to come forward" with information.

Boy Born Without Immunity Does Well

CLEVELAND (AP)—Doctors say a 13-month-old boy who was born without immunities is adapting very well to home life after a year in the hospital— even if he isn't allowed to play with other kids.

Doctors at University Hospital say they may have succeeded for the first time in correcting such a congenital lack of the immunities through transfusions of red blood cells, but they don't want to take chances right now by letting the youngster come in contact with kids who might be carriers of fatal diseases.

Dr. Stephen H. Polmar said Tuesday it has been nearly five weeks since the child left its antiseptic hospital environment and the constant attention of nurses, and the boy is "doing very well at home—much better than we had any right to expect."

Dr. Polmar, an assistant professor of pediatrics at Case Western Reserve University, said the child's identity was being kept secret because the parents don't want publicity and the doctors don't want strangers swarming to see the baby.

"We aren't even telling what area

they live in," Polmar said. He did narrow it down to a location in Ohio 150 miles from the hospital.

The doctor conceded that there had been concern that the child's 372 days in "relative isolation" in the University's Rainbow Babies' and Children's Hospital might have caused problems.

"When you have a child whose only contact with other human beings is people he sees behind gloves, masks, caps and gowns—all he sees is eyes and never really gets close to other people—you have concern because that's not normal."

But he said no psychological abnormality has been detected at the child's "growth and development are entirely normal."

"He started talking at 12½ months and has the appropriate number of words for a child of 13 months."

Polmar noted that the child did get a lot of attention from the nurses, and his mother was with him living at the hospital about two weeks out of every month.

At home, the child, now weighing 20 pounds, is allowed the run of four rooms, and Polmar said he "goes out and plays in the park on nice days."

"We try to keep him away from other kids," the doctor said. "The biggest risk for kids like this is measles and chicken pox. These can be fatal infections. We don't want him near children who might be carriers."

Defense Officials Eye Irregularities

CINCINNATI (AP)—Deputy Defense Secretary William P. Clements Jr. said U.S. Department of Defense personnel who accepted gifts or favors from contractors violated department policy and will be disciplined.

However, Clements told a news conference, he doubts whether the practice is widespread.

"Northrop Corp., unfortunately has misbehaved in a number of areas," Clements said prior to an address to the Tri-State Chapter, American Defense Preparedness Association (ADPA).

"I am leading a group in the Pentagon to investigate charges against Northrop and other companies."

A Pentagon report charged Northrop spent $9.9 million on "questionable costs" and tried to recover $6.1 million from the government. Defense Secretary James Schlesinger later said the disclosure may be "just the tip of the iceberg."

"I am looking for that iceberg," Clements told a news conference, "but I don't think it is there. I will take disciplinary action if I find more wrongdoing. There is a taut directive against this. I hope DOD people are living within the letter and spirit of the directive."

Clements told the meeting "I consider this kind of misconduct inexcusable and unacceptable. If we find anyone who violated policy they will be disciplined."

Robert Murray, deputy assistant defense secretary for manpower and reserve affairs, Brig. Gen. James M. Thompson, deputy for estimates, and Robert N. Parker, deputy for research and engineering, also addressed the gathering of 100 members.

Clements told the chapter the U.S. has a 10-year lead in technology over the Russians.

"However, we have to run like hell" to stay ahead. "We can not stand still. That is our position with Congress."

Clements said the $9 billion in foreign military sales this year will help the U.S. balance of payments but "will not affect the readiness of our own forces."

Clements said the all-volunteer Army program has been a success and that morale and readiness now are higher than before.

Murray said the Selective Service System has been kept in readiness in case the country needs to draft troops again. "It might buy us 30 or 60 days" if a major war should break out, Murray said.

Thompson said the Congressional investigation of the Central Intelligence Agency has had little effect on military intelligence groups although "there is some reluctance of people to come forward" with information.

Pickaway County will receive $15,564.42 in the September distribution of $14,211,341.15 in welfare assistance money, according to State Auditor Thomas E. Ferguson.

Expansion Label Shaken By Bengals

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Cincinnati Bengals are tired of being the new kid on the National Football League block.

Since they started playing eight years ago, the Bengals have worn the tag "expansion" and they have been struggling in vain to shake the label.

No one is looking down at the Bengals anymore. Five games into the season, the Bengals are one of two undefeated NFL teams and their victory over Oakland gives them all the status of the big boys.

"Really we just believe in ourselves," said defensive captain Ron Carpenter. "The biggest difference is attitude. We get down there and we say 'we've done it before,' only now we don't think it, we know, we believe it."

Many of the team's past wrongs have already been righted in the early going. Last year, Houston looked to be an easy opponent, and the Bengals lost twice to the Oilers.

This year, the Bengals came from behind in the last quarter to defeat Houston. Last year, the Bengals suffered the indignity of having Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler stage a last-minute drive which resulted in a game-winning touchdown.

This season, Stabler's final drive ended in an interception by Bengal linebacker Jim LeClair.

"We've had our heartaches, but by and large we've just kept sawing wood, building, planning and staying with it as best we can," said Paul Brown who has raised the team from its infancy and is as proud as a parent can be of the results.

Views On Television

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Van Dyke, an amateur drummer from Danville, Ill., was in town this week to drum up some publicity for his NBC variety special, which airs next Thursday and may become a regular series.

Normally such expeditions are a pain. The subjects usually are half-asleep from jet lag. They give the impression their morning exercise consists of brooding, mulling and grumbling.

Not with Van Dyke, though. The lanky, long-jawed performer exudes such enthusiasm and infectious good humor you get the feeling his idea of depression is a break in a Laurel and Hardy film.

Which wouldn't be unnatural, since the 49-year-old actor grew up watching such films, as well as those of Buster Keaton, and bits of their work always seems to appear whenever he steps before a camera.

"I think it's coming back," he says of their sight-gag style of humor. "The whole Monty Python thing has been such a smash with young people. And that's what it is — a 1975 version of that kind of silliness."

Van Dyke, who for eight years starred in two situation comedies bearing his name, said sight gags will abound in his NBC special, which among other things features two sidekicks from the old days — Mary Tyler Moore and Carl Reiner. He says it won't be the usual variety show.

"There's practically no emceeing and no standing in a two-shot, doing jokes from cue cards," he said. "There's a lot of movement, a lot of mime. We wanted it to be interesting to look at."

And, he said, "I wanted to do a certain kind of comedy. I'm sick of current event jokes, jokes about New York and the President. Those produce a kind of intellectual laugh that's not satisfying. "There seems to be a move on that we're admonished to take our comedy seriously now. If it doesn't have a message in it —" He paused, then began laughing. "Ahh, heck. I did silliness for its own sake."

Two years ago, the man who goes for the belly laugh stepped out of character for a powerful TV film, "The Morning After," in which he played a young company man who has become an alcoholic.

At the time, he also shocked his fans by admitting he himself had had trouble with drinking and now was a recovered alcoholic. Van Dyke, a member of Alcoholics Anonymous, said he was pleased at the public reaction to that movie in that at least it shocked some people into a new awareness of alcoholism as a disease.

Now, he says, if he gets time, he'll do "sort of a sequel" to it in a TV movie about the process of recovering from alcoholism.

Modell Seeks Warfield's Services

CLEVELAND (AP) — Art Modell, owner of the Cleveland Browns, says he is actively seeking to sign receiver Paul Warfield and fullback Larry Csonka now that the World Football League has collapsed.

"I've had conversations with their representatives," Modell said of the two players who were playing for the WFL Memphis franchise.
